

Gorton Teeters In Party Crisis

CANBERRA (Reuter)—Malcolm Fraser, who resigned as Australian defence minister, told Parliament today that Prime Minister John Gorton is not fit to lead the country.

Fraser, who quit Monday in a bitter personal feud with the Australian leader, put Gorton squarely on the spot and left him fighting for his political future.

"He is not fit to hold the great office of prime minister," Fraser said.

Fraser's report in the newspaper, The Australian, about relations between Fraser and the army led to the minister's resignation.

The opposition Labor party now plans to present a no-confidence motion Wednesday, and if only three members of the ruling Liberal-Country party coalition defect in the delicately-balanced House of Representatives, the government could be defeated.

Fraser added more fuel to the fire today, accusing the 56-year-old Gorton of obstinacy, impetuosity and emotional reactions and with having imposed strains on the government.

"I cannot serve in his government," Fraser said, adding that Gorton was guilty of "an unreasoned drive to get his own way."

Earlier, Gorton faced a meeting of parliamentary members of his Liberal party and was sharply rebuffed.

Three members were said to have told Gorton they would not vote for an opposition motion against him. Two others said they thought he should step down.

Political observers do not predict an imminent general election if Gorton is defeated—only his replacement by another Liberal as head of government.

Trudeaus Return To Fans, Storm

Times Ottawa Bureau

OTTAWA — The best and the worst of Ottawa greeted Prime Minister Pierre Elliott Trudeau and his 22-year-old bride of four days Monday night.

The best was a crowd of between 400 and 500 hardy souls who turned out to cheer the new chateau of 21 Sussex Drive and to shout heartily at the prime minister: "Good for you, Pierre."

The worst was the 10-degree weather, the swirling snowstorm and the near-gale winds that rocked the Department of Transport Jetstar as it set down at Uplands Airport and whipped round the faces of the newlyweds as they alighted from the aircraft.

MISERABLE

It was one of the most miserable Ottawa nights in memory — weatherwise — but for the excited crowd out to meet the new Mrs. Trudeau it was a fairly tale come true.

The bride, the former Margaret Sinclair of North Vancouver, stepped into the hell of Ottawa's winter wearing a red tapestry midi skirt with matching coat, a white fur hat, and red leather boots.

And a smile that stretched from ear to ear and was as warm as an August morning. She and the prime minister, looking surprisingly boyish and trying to stay in the background, were greeted at the airport by Public Works Minister and Mrs. Arthur Laing of Vancouver South.

(Laing was acting prime minister in Trudeau's absence. The normal acting prime minister, External Affairs Minister Mitchell Sharp, is away on a 16-day official visit to five African nations.)

Also on hand on the ice-and-snow-covered tarmac — Ottawa has had an all-time record 155 inches of snow so far this winter — was Toronto MP Barney Danson, the prime minister's parliamentary secretary.

PRESUMED DEAD on Monday and alive and aching today at his home is Bruce Allen, 43, of 108 Burnett. His small boat had been found Sunday morning drifting in Saanich Inlet, and a two-day search failed to find him. The story of what really happened is on Page 13.

'Worst Over' For Tug, Freighter

VANCOUVER (CP) — The crippled Dutch freighter Aftilian Star was being hauled through the Queen Charlotte Strait today on the last leg of its voyage to Vancouver.

For the first time in three days the vessel and its crew of 31 were out of gale-force winds and the heaving seas of the North Pacific.

A tugboat company captain said: "The worst is over. The ship is in the lee of Vancouver Island where the waters are calmer."

China Gives U.S. Serious Warning On 'Aggression'

Times News Services

PEKING — Premier Chou En-lai returned here Monday night after a previously unannounced visit to Hanoi where he issued the most serious warning to date concerning the "serious threat" the United States is "posing" to China.

Few details of his visit were available here — the first information came from a Hanoi radio broadcast — but observers generally echoed the diplomat who remarked: Chou En-lai doesn't go anywhere for nothing.

The Friday-to-Monday visit was notable for the high-level military officials accompanying Chou, armed forces deputy chief of staff Chou Hui-tso and Yeh Chien-yung, vice-chairman of the Communist party's military affairs commission.

According to Hanoi radio, Chou declared that his country had made "adequate preparations" to meet the American threat but he did not elaborate.

'CLOSE NEIGHBORS'

The three Indochina countries are China's close neighbors. By willfully enlarging their aggressive war in the Indochina area, the U.S. imperialists are posing a serious threat to China. The Chinese government and the Chinese people have already seen through all the frenzied and adventurous nature of the U.S. imperialists and have made adequate preparations. Chou said.

"The Nixon government must be responsible for all the serious consequences arising from its unending expansion of the aggressive war in the Indochina region."

These words, were offset to some degree at least by following statements that "at present the international situation is very good" and that the Nixon administration is "facing difficulties both at home and abroad and becoming very weak." Chou said this was "clear enough" from President Nixon's recent State of the World message.

'MORALE MISSION'

In Washington today officials were quoted as saying that the Chinese threats as a whole have not yet approached the level of warning issued prior to Peking's intervention in the Korean War. One official said the Chou visit was essentially a "morale mission."

Reinforcing the importance of Chou's journey to Hanoi is the fact that he has made only two other trips outside China since 1966. In September, 1969, he made a brief appearance in Hanoi to pay his respects at the tier of Ho Chi Minh.

In April last year he made a three-day state visit to North Korea with full fanfare.

Although his departure was secret, Chou's arrival home was grandly marked. Thousands of cheerers, slogan-shouters and colorfully-costumed performers were taken in buses to the airport hours before the premier's plane touched down.

WORDS GROW STERN

He was greeted by armed forces chief Huang Yung-Sheng, Cambodia's Prince Norodom Sihanouk and a solid turnout of party politbureau members.

Chinese statements about Indochina grew more stern last month after the U.S.-supported invasion of Laos. China called the action a grave threat to this country and promised to take "all effective measures" to aid its Indochinese allies.

Laird Says Red Weapons Advancing

WASHINGTON (Reuter) — Defence Secretary Melvin Laird reported today further Soviet and Chinese progress in strategic weapons, but asked Congress for only a limited expansion of the Safeguard anti-ballistic missile system.

He said the nature of the Russian and Chinese nuclear threats was serious enough to call for full deployment of Safeguard, to embrace 12 widely separated sites, if eventually authorized.

But he told the House of Representatives armed services committee that President Nixon had decided to exercise restraint in the hope that the strategic arms limitation talks with the Soviet Union will produce agreements to scale down the arms race.

Laird said in his annual defence strategy statement to Congress that China might have tested an intercontinental ballistic missile over a reduced range last year.

Defence officials said there were indications, although not conclusive evidence, that the test took place over several thousand miles.

'VICTORY FOR B.C. PEOPLE'

'Road-Running' Halted

By PETER MCNELLY

The provincial government moved Monday to protect and control development of lands adjacent to new highways.

And the New Democratic Party hailed the move as a "genuine victory for the people of British Columbia," which followed their attack on land speculation earlier in the legislative session.

Highways Minister Wesley Black introduced in the legislature an amendment to the Department of Highways Act which gives the government the power to expropriate any land adjacent to new, proposed or relocated highways.

The amendment does not apply to existing highways. The government has been under heavy fire this session from New Democrat MLAs led by Robert Williams (NDP, Vancouver East) for failing to halt land speculation, nicknamed "road-running."

Williams has charged that Premier Bennett's sons are among "a growing class of rip-off artists and millionaires on the make" who have profited from development of lands adjacent to B.C. highways.

In an interview outside the legislature, Black denied that the government brought in the amendment because of Williams' attacks.

"We have been considering an amendment to this act for some time," Black said, "but it's been very difficult to come up with the correct wording and a great many other facets."

Black praised the bill for being "gutsy" and "simple." The government has the authority to sell, lease, dispose of by tender or auction any lands it may expropriate under the Department of Highways Act.

"Nothing in the act or the amendment requires the government to expropriate lands adjacent to public highways."

Present wording of the act allows expropriation only for the purposes of acquiring lands for public works or establishment of wildlife reserves. The amendment enlarges this power to include "the purpose of protecting and controlling the use of any land adjacent to the right-of-way of any proposed, new, or newly relocated highway."

response to his earlier charges against the premier's sons.

He said the government "is obviously embarrassed by the disclosures."

PROMISE EARLIER

Williams noted that Bennett had promised in 1968 as highways minister after Phil Gaglardi resigned, also under fire for land deals involving his sons that "road-running" would stop.

"I said at the time it was a victory for the people," Williams said. "Now that this has been placed in statute form, we consider it to be a genuine victory for the people of British Columbia."

Williams warned that the amendment could just be a "smokescreen" unless the government pursues an aggressive program of land acquisition. This is the only way to erase the "unhappy past record" of the government as far as land speculation near highways is concerned, he said.

Alex Macdonald (NDP, Vancouver East), who first used the phrase "road-running" back in 1968, said Friday the bill gives the

Janitors' Contract Accepted

A contract between Greater Victoria school board and janitors, tradesmen and groundsmen has been accepted by both sides.

The board's finance and legal committee, which includes all nine trustees, recommended acceptance of the new two-year pact at a meeting Monday.

The workmen had voted to accept by a 66 per cent majority Sunday. They will get an eight per cent pay increase this year and 7 1/2 per cent in 1972.

The janitors, represented by the Canadian Union of Public Employees, have agreed to a Tuesday to Saturday week, paving the way for schools to be open six days a week.

The board will pay janitors eight hours' wages for seven hours work. Janitresses will be paid at the same rates as janitors when they perform the same kinds of work.

Rose Told Policemen Where Masks Hidden

MONTREAL (CP) — The Crown closed its case today in the trial of Paul Rose accused of kidnapping and murdering Pierre Laporte, Quebec's former labor minister, last October.

The move followed testimony from a Quebec Provincial Policeman who said that on instruction from Rose, rifle stocks and disguises were found in nearby St. Hubert.

Sgt. Marcel Ste. Marie said stocks for M-1 rifles, three plastic face masks, a pair of sunglasses and two woolen hats were found hidden at the Armstrong St. house identified as the place where Laporte was held.

The material found by police on two separate trips — both made at Rose's suggestion according to testimony — was hidden by a trap door in the ceiling of a closet.

Sgt. Ste. Marie said Rose

told him on Dec. 29 to look for the trap door and on Jan. 7 asked whether a bag containing the disguises had been found.

Police missed the bag in the first check but found it in a second trip.

Three Comedy Types Explored at Festival

Three types of comedy were explored Monday night at the 31st Greater Victoria Drama Festival at Norfolk House.

"We have three kinds of comedy represented," said adjudicator Carl Hare. "The Madwoman of Chaillot represents fantasy, George Bernard Shaw's Passion, Poison, and Petrification represents farcical parody, and Arthur Kopit's drama Chamber Music is a typical example of black comedy."

He went on to present criticisms for each of the performances to a capacity audience.

INTERESTING

"Madwoman, offered by Norfolk House" girls is an extremely interesting selection, for although it was written in the '30s, it is pertinent to today's living — this marvelous play which affirms the joy of living, and condemns those who pollute."

Hare pointed out that the play's difficulties lie in the portrayal and understanding of foreign attitudes and qualities in the characters, and in the translation of the text from French to English. Another pitfall was attributed to the all-girl cast which could not handle all the male characters with ease.

LIVE IN PAST ERA

The play concerns four women of "undetermined but ancient age" who live in a past era and wish to preserve some of the qualities of that era. Hare remarked, "On the whole, these girls could not find that quality of delightful insanity which is more sane than normal. The selection was a little too ambitious even though there were some good parts."

The Shaw parody, presented by Oak Bay Junior High, was pointed out to be a vehicle for melodrama, and the portrayal of social customs, within the structure of the farce.

"All the energy, the terrific exact energy of this type of play must be here," noted Hare. "The difficulty is that the players must all be terribly serious at all times."

He went on to say that the performance was entertaining, that Betsy Burt's representation of Lady Magnesia had a good sense of the "grand style," and that Greg Terpenning, who portrayed Adolphus, must not realize that he is being funny.

PERFORMANCE BRIGHT

Hare said the performance was bright and entertaining, but missed the sharp criticism of social customs: "Arthur Kopit's Chamber Music, presented by Norfolk House, is a unique and disturbing play, rapidly becoming a modern classic," Hare told the audience.

"There is a whole variety of levels, but essentially it begins funny, with a great deal of comic dialogue. By the end we have realized that it is taking place in an insane asylum and there is a dead body on the stage.

"Kopit has this ability to make us laugh, and he undercuts the humor and we are left feeling rather sick."

FRASES CASTING

Hare praised the cast saying, "The cast worked together well and worked against each other in a complementary way. They were all extremely competent."

"Karen Olsen's 'Mrs. Mozart' was good. Laura Steel as 'Gertrude Stein' was strong and pathetic and showed a strong sense of belief in the character she was playing, and Janet Andros as the Woman with Gavel gave us a fine visually sensitive performance."

Hare concluded, "Chamber Music gave us believable characterizations and a fine performance. The whole evening was extremely worthwhile."

The festival continues to-night at Mount Douglas Senior High at 8.

This is because B.C.'s major highway projects have been completed.

"It's a pity that it's restricted to new or newly-relocated highways, because the money-makers already exist along the highways in the province," Macdonald said.

He said the powers in the amendment should be expanded to allow undeveloped lands along existing highways to be purchased at assessed value.

Many of these lands, he said, are owned by "friends of the government."

Howard Award To Pearson

The John Howard Society of Vancouver Island's third annual award to persons who have made an outstanding contribution to the organization and to the community will go to Saanich Police Chief W. A. Pearson.

He will receive the award at the society's annual meeting in Port Alberni March 27.

Michael Bennett, the society's executive director, said the award is for dedicated community service and not just for persons who have done something within the John Howard Society, although Pearson has been an active supporter of the society for years and served in various capacities.

He said that, as a police officer, Pearson has always shown "the utmost in cooperation" and that the department, under his leadership, has "gone out of its way" to promote good relations with the public.

Former Liberal Speaker Dies

KAMLOOPS (CP) — Funeral services will be held in Kamloops Wednesday for Robert Henry Carson, former speaker of the British Columbia legislature who died Sunday at age 82.

He became speaker of the house in 1947 and held the post for two years.

Alleged Hijacker Deported

BELLINGHAM, Wash. (AP) — Chapin Scott Paterson was arraigned on federal charges of air piracy and placed in custody in lieu of $50,000 bail Monday night on allegations of hijacking a Western Airlines jet between San Francisco and Seattle.

Bail was set by U.S. Commissioner Richard Fleeson during a hearing held in the Whatcom County jail, said Sheriff Bernie Reynolds.

Paterson was turned over to U.S. authorities earlier Monday at Blaine, Wash., on the international border after Mr. Justice Victor Dryer of British Columbia Supreme Court upheld an immigration department order for deportation.

Paterson, a 19-year-old army draftee from Shingle Springs, Calif., was ordered deported last Tuesday after he was accused of hijacking a Boeing 737 on Feb. 25.

He was to be held here overnight in Whatcom County jail and was expected to be brought to Seattle today.

Prior expected the hearing, dealing with a bid to lower the par value of shares from $5 to $2, to resume Thursday.

New Rules Will Guard Pink Salmon

VANCOUVER (CP) — All pink salmon taken by purse seine in the Johnstone Strait July 25 to Aug. 21 will have to be released.

W. R. Hourston, fisheries director for the Pacific region, said this is one of several restrictions laid down to protect an "extremely poor" return of 370,000 pink salmon this year.

He said about half a million Fraser River pinks will also enter the Johnstone Strait which lies between northern Vancouver Island and the mainland.

All troll-caught pinks between July 11-Aug. 21 are also to be released, Mr. Hourston said. "If a high mortality of pinks is observed during the peak period the only alternative will be a closure of the Johnstone Strait area," he said.

In contrast to the pinks, the expected return of sockeye will be about 4.8 million, predicts the International Pacific Salmon Fisheries Commission.

Haig-Brown Joins E 100 Speakers

An environment meeting will be addressed by Uvic chancellor and conservationist Roderick Haig-Brown in Victoria next week.

Also speaking will be Dr. Marc Bell and Dr. Derek Ellis of the Environment 100 project.

The engineers' branch said it endorses Environment 100 in its aim to establish an information centre without advocacy on environmental subjects.

The meeting title is "Will the River Live?" Two short films will be shown. Admission is free but there will be a collection with proceeds going to Environment 100.

Board Seeks $12,000 Aid

The Greater Victoria school board will seek a $12,000 government grant to help run a special class for autistic children.

A. J. Longmore, district superintendent, told members of the board's education committee Monday a class would cost about $24,000 a year to operate.

Longmore's suggestion that such a class be established in the Eric Martin Institute was opposed by psychiatrist and trustee Dr. Phillip Ney.

"That's just a concrete block," he said. "The children would have little contact with the outdoors which they need."

Uvic Governors Scored For Contract 'Ploy'

The board of governors at the University of Victoria is engaging in an "unacceptable ploy" by holding off a definitive statement on the current tenure and contract dispute until the end of the winter session, the new student president charged today.

Ian J. McKinnon, recently elected president of the Alma Mater Society, accused the board in an open letter of "willingly postponing any definitive statement on the issues to preclude its consideration by students and faculty prior to the conclusion of the winter session."

He said that from the point of view of the board it was "logistically" an excellent manoeuvre, "but from the point of view of those concerned, an unacceptable ploy."

Willard Ireland, chairman of the board, denied this morning there was any ploy and said the university's highest decision-making body was "working" with the Canadian Association of University Teachers to settle the problem.

'UNTENABLE POSITIONS' Ireland said the board had been "working under the terms" requested by the CAUT in dealing with the dispute.

The CAUT has been involved in a lengthy investigation of administrative procedures involved in the denial of tenure for two assistant professors, Dr. Tikam Jain of chemistry and Dr. William Goede of English, and refusal of promotion for philosophy instructor Toby Graff.

McKinnon's letter also attacked "untenable positions" taken by Uvic president Bruce Partridge since his appointment which have resulted in the campus "being enveloped in an atmosphere of increasing tension and internal struggles."

It accused Partridge of assuming "the role of academic watchdog for which he is eminently unqualified."

'REPERCUSSIONS'

"The repercussions now experienced as a result of his decisions would tend to jeopardize his utility as an administrator also," the letter said.

It demanded that the board clarify whether Partridge's role, at the time of his appointment, was to be as administrator or "a legitimately qualified academic" and whether the role had evolved into something else.

The letter also asked whether Partridge had full support of the board in all actions he had taken in the procedures of the faculty tenure and contract dispute.

Ireland said the answer to that question was clearly defined in the Universities Act which said the president was responsible for making recommendations to the board and the board for acting on them.

The chairman refused to comment on McKinnon's letter as a whole because he did not wish to prejudice the board's opinion with his own. He said the board would consider the letter as a normal course of action.

McKinnon's letter also praised the student newspaper The Martlet and "other news media" for "bringing certain apparent discrepancies to light, particularly where statements by Mr. Partridge are concerned, to the extent that confidence in the veracity of statements by Partridge has been put to serious question."

Meanwhile, faculty members from two departments condemned nine senior administrative personnel who signed a memorandum to Ireland calling for "immediate and appropriate disciplinary action to save Uvic and to prevent recurrence of the recent unprincipled and malicious acts of a few misguided students and faculty."

The memorandum, which appeared in the Martlet, was signed by Peter Darling, Shirley Baker, W. M. Bender, Edward Shoffner, Edgar Lloyd, H. R. Widdfield, Gertrude Hartman, Ron Ferry and George Apps.

A faculty letter condemning the nine was signed by J. P.

Mentha, assistant professor of French; L. Marampon, lecturer in Italian; K. R. Prior, lecturer in French, and D. F. Henn, lecturer in Spanish.

"If those who signed the letter cannot name those they accuse, they should remain silent. If they can, they should do so publicly, and be prepared to defend their accusations."

The four faculty also attack the administrators for making a statement "inappropriate" to their roles within the university.

"The administrative staff is hired to keep the books, and has no place, as a body, in policy decisions."

Oak Bay Yes, Saanich No, On Bargaining Together

Oak Bay council agreed Monday night plans should be made toward co-operating with Victoria, Saanich and Esquimalt in joint labor negotiations in 1972.

Ald. Brian Smith said, "Labor negotiations are getting very complex—very organized. We may get a better bargain by pooling our expertise."

Ald. John Goult agreed: "The matter should not be delayed."

Mayor Frances Elford told council they should "get moving early so that we can do something next year."

REJECTED

Saanich, however, is apparently uninterested in any joint negotiations with core municipalities. Monday it rejected a Victoria proposal to form a single bargaining unit.

In other business, Col. A. O. Hood, chairman of the Greater Victoria Library Board, appeared before council to substantiate the board's proposed budget increases—mainly for the purchase of books.

He received enthusiastic support from both Smith and Goult, the latter pointing out the futility of establishing a branch library in Oak Bay "and then starving it of books."

Ald. Douglas Watts asked Hood how much it would cost to operate a branch library. Hood said he had no specific figures, that the Town and Country branch cost about $40,000 a year. He felt costs would range between $30,000 and $33,000.

TWO BITES

Watts warned, "It might be in the interest of the long-suffering taxpayer to take two bites of the apple."

The estimates committee will consider the budget and report to council.

Twenty-three letters supporting the Royal Victoria Yacht Club's bid to build a breakwater in Cadboro Bay were received.

Mayor Elford suggested that the club be required to have a hydraulic survey made of the area.

She said: "We owe it to all the residents of Oak Bay to insist that such a study be carried out."

When the mayor added that the federal public works department had carried out a feasibility study of the Turkey Head area, Watts replied:

"Turkey Head and Cadboro Bay are apples and oranges. There is no comparison with the tidal action."

COSTLY STUDY

Pointing out that such studies are expensive, Smith said council had no right to demand a study be made by the club before appearing before council.

Goult agreed: "We are not in a position of saying you have to have such a test before you can talk to us."

A delegation from the Recreation Action Group, which is pushing for a major recreation centre in Oak Bay, was at the meeting.

Mayor Elford noted that a petition supporting the group, signed by 3,600 home-owners, had not been handed in to council. RAG president Bert Bertola explained that the list was being used as reference for a phoning committee.

MEETING SET

Council unanimously agreed in principle it was desirable to have such a complex in the municipality. Bertola's group will meet council's special recreation complex committee which is headed by Watts.

Michael Gregson, 2169 Beach, represented 195 students who have signed a petition asking the municipality provide summer employment. In their brief they said they would be willing to work for $2.40 an hour. B.C.'s Minimum Wage Act sets the minimum rate at $1.50 an hour and Oak Bay pays its temporary laborers $2.93 an hour.

Gregson said the students were not in a position to demand or dictate rates but that they should be set by the municipality if the idea appealed to council.

OPPOSE BILL

Council voted unanimous disapproval of the provincial government's proposed legislation to disallow any school board employee the right to serve as a school trustee.

Smith argued: "I can't see the logic of removing these people, if they're not serving on their own district's board. This means we would lose Mr. (Allan) McKinnon, chairman of the Greater Victoria district."

Council also condemned increases in domestic air fares recently granted by the Air Transport Commission. Smith said it cost $286 to fly to Montreal and back while for $80 less a person could fly return to England from Vancouver.

"In this country there are no special rates. It appears to be the policy to put rates up and up—no one can afford to travel. There should be mid-week excursion rates."

A specialist in college administration has been appointed principal of Camosun College, the college council announced today.

Dr. Grant Fisher, 35, associate professor of education at the University of Alberta, will begin duties as principal June 1.

Contacted in Edmonton today, he declined to comment on specific plans for Camosun College, saying these have to be made in consultation with elected officials and administrative staff.

"My general thinking is that the college should attempt to meet the community's needs," he said.

He added one of the pitfalls of community colleges is that they sometimes duplicate programs offered in universities.

Carron Jameson, chairman of the college council, said Fisher will fly to Victoria on long weekends to take part in meetings until he is able to terminate his appointment at the U. of A.

FISHER
from Alberta

He said of Fisher's appointment:

"I was delighted. I was also astounded at the very high calibre of candidates that did apply."

Fisher was selected from 237 applicants.

Two important tasks facing the college administration are publication of a calendar and hiring of faculty, Jameson said.

A meeting to discuss hiring of senior staff will be held March 18, Jameson said. Teachers at the Institute of Adult Studies are currently employed by the Greater Victoria school board. They must re-apply for positions at the college.

There will probably be an increase in the number of teachers hired by the college, Jameson said.

Fisher was born and raised at Hillspring in southwest Alberta. During 1956-58 he worked as a missionary in southern Africa. He obtained a bachelor of science degree from Brigham Young University, Utah, in 1960, and a master's degree in mathematics and chemistry from the University of Utah in 1961.

Since then he has held teaching and administrative jobs at the secondary school, college and university level, including the University of Calgary, Medicine Hat College and Red Deer College. He obtained his Ph.D. from the University of Calgary in 1969. His thesis was an analysis of decision-making on a college advisory committee.

Last year Fisher became co-ordinator of the U. of A.'s college administration project which is sponsored by the Kellogg Foundation. He is married and has five children.

Sewer Solution Seen For Sidney Beaches

"No Bathing" signs will be removed from Sidney's beaches and the problem of overloading sewers solved early in 1972.

Capital Regional District notified Sidney council Monday that tenders will be called within 30 days for the first stage of the $1,000,000 trunk sewer and treatment plant construction program.

Council voted to start on the 1971 storm drain installation, estimated to cost $100,000, as part of its commitment to the pollution control board.

Mayor Stan Dear said in order to obtain the treatment plant permit the town has agreed to remove most of the storm water from its sewers within the next 10 years and all of it within 16 years.

First on the program will be Maryland subdivision whose 80 residents will be petitioned to share storm drain costs with the town of Sidney on a 50-50 basis.

Total cost of drains in this area which contribute a large amount of storm water to overloaded sewers is about $50,000.

Later this year storm water will be drained on Amelia and Bradford Avenue and council intends to petition to extend sewers and storm drains into the Mill Road industrial area west of Pay Bay Highway.

According to Bill Gerry, Capital Regional District director of engineering, designs for the treatment plant and outfall should be finished by the end of April.

Healing Substance... Shrinks Piles, Checks Itch

Exclusive healing substance proven to shrink hemorrhoids...and repair damaged tissue.

A renowned research institute has found a unique healing substance with the ability to shrink hemorrhoids painlessly. It relieves itching and discomfort in minutes and speeds up healing of the injured, inflamed tissues.

One hemorrhoidal case history after another reported "very striking improvement." Pain was promptly and gently relieved... actual reduction or retraction (shrinking) took place.

And most important—this improvement was maintained in cases where clinical observations were continued over a period of many months. Furthermore, these tests and observations were made on patients with a wide variety of hemorrhoidal conditions. All this was accomplished with a healing substance (Bio-Dyne) which quickly helps heal injured cells and stimulates growth of new tissue. Bio-Dyne is offered in ointment and suppository form called Preparation H.

In addition to actually shrinking hemorrhoids, Preparation H lubricates and makes elimination less painful. It helps prevent infection which is a stated cause of hemorrhoids.

Just ask your druggist for Preparation H Suppositories or Preparation H Ointment (with a special applicator).

A Corner Turned?

IF INFLATION IN CANADA has not been curbed it is at least being eased; its pace is slowed, its erosion of the dollar's value has become less savage. National unemployment, one of the sorry by-products of the measures which achieve this result, quickly became the federal government's prime target for remedial action. And now it, too, is showing some signs of beginning to respond to the influences that are being applied.

Some of these measures were outlined by Prime Minister Trudeau recently before a Regina audience. They do not constitute a cure for unemployment, but they are necessary stop-gaps to ease the plight of unemployed persons until the basic national economy can once again absorb them. "An economic recession is a national problem," Mr. Trudeau said, "unemployment is a personal problem." It has been approached, in the emergency, on that basis.

One of the aspects usually lost sight of in consideration of the number of persons out of work is the fact that the number of persons in employment has also rapidly risen. "The number of persons working rose considerably faster in Canada in 1970 than it did in any of the other industrialized countries, including the United States," Mr. Trudeau pointed out. The labor force has increased by about three per cent in each of the past three years. More than 200,000 new jobs must be created in Canada each year just to keep the unemployment figures static.

Such considerations, however, do not hide the fact that a tragic number of Canadians are out of work today, and the government must not slacken its efforts until this top priority problem is overcome. Some of the measures taken to swing the economy back from the emphasis on anti-inflationary efforts have contributed directly to the provision of employment.

A year ago an expansionary budget began to turn the tide; last summer outlays to the provinces were increased by $350 millions, and at the same time there was a $73-million program to increase student employment and social assistance. An extra $100 millions was put into housing construction (the increase is $140 millions this year). Regional aid and manpower training received a $60-million grant. In last December's budget there were further allocations of millions for various programs, a 10-per-cent increase in unemployment insurance benefits, and numerous multi-million-dollar proposals for additional housing and other job-creating projects.

Obviously, not many of these measures can have permanent effect. The results, says Mr. Trudeau, "are not what I should like them to be." They are only interim steps until a basic improvement can be made. It is a monstrous contradiction of logic that a young country such as Canada, rich in resources and technical capability and with a population able and anxious to work, should be coping with the problem of 800,000 able-bodied men and women who have no jobs.

That can be only a temporary situation but it is none the less real. Fortunately the tide appears now to have turned—and sooner than in some other countries.

Sentiment Into Law

MR. HERB GRAY, THE MINISTER of National Revenue, and the man who is supervising the cabinet study on foreign investments, spoke at the University of Windsor on March 6. He made no specific revelations of the findings of the cabinet study but the general tone of these findings no doubt were reflected in his remarks.

Mr. Gray's comments on the problem of foreign investments reflect more than attention to the problem of Canadian control—they are concerned much more with the performance of industries which might become subject to control. The efficiency and productivity of individual firms should be considered as well, he said. The encouragement of Canadian production facilities would have to accompany any restrictive measures against foreign-owned firms.

The debate on foreign ownership is entering a complex and subtle stage. The question which seems to occupy Mr. Gray involves the methods of implementation which would have the least shock and dislocation for the national economy. The question is no longer so much whether restrictions on foreign ownership are necessary, as what specific firms or industries should be subject to restrictions and for what specific reasons. The principal consideration now seems to be the ability of Canada to absorb the changes which are coming.

Most Canadians have indicated a positive response to the necessity of foreign investment restrictions. There have been numerous reports on the problem of foreign economic control and the facts and probable results of such control are hardly in doubt. The very delicate job of translating public sentiment into legislation which will be acceptable because it is economically feasible as well as politically desirable has now begun. With very little fanfare we are entering the dollars and cents phase of a new national policy.

The Illogic of Noise

THIRTY HECKLERS IN A gathering of about 200 people succeeded in their primary objective of preventing Justice Minister John Turner from lecturing on violence in modern society — part of a series of lectures presented at the University of British Columbia. By the sheer din of their shouting the minority had its way.

In the long range, the victory will be Pyrrhic. The cost will be far too high and those who refused to let others hear must eventually suffer if their own technique is turned back upon them.

The disruptive group chose the cheap slogan: "No free speech for the Quebecois, no free speech for Turner" as a part of their demonstration against invocation of the War Measures Act. The use of the act has come under serious criticism and the debate on its application will continue. It is a sign of weakness on the part of the group at UBC, however, that its members were not prepared to let others hear part of the debate in the form of Mr. Turner's lecture. Noise is no proper rebuttal.

Once again a small group which loudly shouts democracy when that shout suits its purposes has shown a complete disbelief in the democratic dialogue and the principles of fair play.

True, they stopped John Turner. But the manner in which they did it can only destroy their cause.

Concorde—With a Bang, Not a Whimper

THE BRITISH GOVERNMENT must soon face the question of whether the Anglo-French supersonic airliner Concorde is the aircraft of tomorrow or a monster white elephant which has gobbed up nearly $1 billion of the taxpayers' money. The future of Concorde, the one example of British and French superiority in aviation technology, never was assured. Concorde, and with it the future of the British aviation industry, still hangs as a disconcerting backdrop to the present talks here to save the Rolls-Royce RB-211 engine for the American Lockheed Tristar Airbus.

Humphreys

The only practical immediate connection between Tristar and Concorde is that both are powered with different Rolls engines. Concorde's secured by a treaty and the government's partial nationalization of the bankrupt Rolls company. Yet Concorde, whatever its success, is proving that supersonic aviation technology is internationally interdependent.

New York State Assemblyman Andrew Stein demonstrated this by his proposed noise pollution bill which would have the effect of banning Concorde from New York's Kennedy airport. Former Labor Technology Minister Anthony Wedgwood Benn has returned from New York, where he gave evidence against the Stein bill, with the impression that if the RB-211 is not saved Concorde won't have a hope.

American Move Foreseen

Mr. Benn's contentious point was that American interests would see to it that Concorde was barred if the British government lets Rolls renege on its RB-211 contract, with the possibility of a snowballing bankruptcy at Lockheed and serious economic dislocation in the U.S.

It is tempting to the British in their present gloomy frame of mind to believe the worst, even though it may be contrary to the evidence. This is that American opponents of Concorde are in fact the environment specialists, opposed to all supersonic airliners.

What the Stein scare and the environment movement have proved already is that, incredibly, the British and French governments committed themselves to spending unspecified millions without being assured of any return on their investment and without knowing the consequences of their collaboration.

Mr. Benn said: "I doubt whether Britain or America will ever undertake projects on this scale again without having gone through on a grand scale the same sort of proceedings as were enacted on Thursday" (the Stein hearings).

Until recently, and certainly at its conception in 1961, the supersonic airliner was unquestionably a Good Thing. It was the logical extension of the jet breakthrough. Concorde would fly 140 passengers across the Atlantic in three-and-a-half hours at 1,400 miles an hour. Passengers and public would be happy. The airliners would make piles of money. And British and French technology would have been triumphant.

Now, even those assumptions are doubted and many more besides. It is true that time — a decade is a long time in aviation technology — and the unforeseen environment craze have taken their toll. But they are by no means the whole story.

Anticipated Earnings

The informed British government view in 1969, when Mr. Benn was technology minister, was that in full production Concorde would earn the British-French manufacturers $600 million a year. An airline with a fleet of 12 with 60 per cent of capacity and at rates 25 per cent higher than jets (note the assumption) would yield the airline a profit of about $360 million over 12 years.

By last autumn Tory Technology Minister John Davies found it necessary to doubt publicly that Concorde could ever make a profit "in the monetary sense". But there were all sorts of spin-off technological benefits, he was sure. He added:

"Concorde will continually be under scrutiny because we cannot afford as a country to spend money on things that are not worth having. But Concorde is not yet in that category." In fact the British Aircraft Corporation claims Concorde prototypes measure up to promised weight and speed specifications. They will do everything promised when world airlines took out 71 options to buy. Of these, 38 were taken by American airlines and four by Air Canada.

No Rush to Sign

Now it is time to convert the options to firm orders and there is no rush to sign. The American airlines remain skeptical about profitability. Since Concorde was begun, the jumbo jet has been conceived, planned and put into service, apparently unforeseen, yet formidable, competition. The problem of noise, always considered to be solvable, has not in fact been fully solved. When Concorde made its first unscheduled landing at London's Heathrow, the airport was flooded with complaints, removing any doubt that it could glide in unnoticed, through the back door as it were.

Objections were based on airport noise, one of the easiest problems to correct. They did not touch the peculiar Concorde problem of sonic boom.

The case against Concorde has gained a hearing partly because of the Stein bill publicity. British government and American airline caution, and partly owing to publication of a book documenting it. For opponents, The Case Against Supersonic Transport by Richard Wiggs, published here, is almost too good to be true.

Unlike some professional protesters, Mr. Wiggs has labored quietly since 1967 to produce a thoroughly documented case. He, too, gave evidence in New York, in favor of the Stein bill.

Among about 25 questions, Mr. Wigg raises two of prime importance now. One is the sonic bang. He quotes American experts to the point that no "cure" is in sight and that overland sonic flights will be unacceptable. Since Air Canada's Concorde would be integrated into the North Atlantic service from Toronto and Montreal, there would be no hope of eliminating regular sonic bangs for residents in the overland flight path.

But Mr. Wigg also quotes Canadian air regulations: "No aircraft shall be flown in such a manner as to create a shockwave the effect of which is to create or is likely to create a hazard to other aircraft or to persons or property on the ground."

Canadian Prospect

Thus it is quite possible that Canadian air regulations prohibit Air Canada from converting its four options into aircraft. Sonic bang, Mr. Wiggs points out, is not only one bang during each flight. "Just as a ship produces a bow wave throughout its entire journey, so a supersonic aircraft generates a sonic bang throughout its entire flight at supersonic speed." If the problem is resolved for any great distance by flying at subsonic speed than the whole speed advantage is reduced.

Mr. Wigg's other fundamental point is to question the continuing salability of speed. Concorde will reduce transit time from one city centre to the other from ten hours to seven. Whether that savings will attract enough passengers paying a quarter extra is surely being carefully studied by the airlines.

If Concorde doesn't measure up on these terms, no amount of horse trading by the British and American governments on the RB-211 is going to save it. Thoughts of its cancellation so soon after the Rolls-Royce collapse must put ministers into a cold sweat. Like Rolls, the Concorde has been allowed to gather an aura of national prestige. Its loss would complete the demoralization of an already run-down British aircraft industry which the Tories undertook to rebuild. But a major rationalization with painful decisions may be unavoidable first.

Letters

Wrong Ones to Squawk

Re the headline in the March 4 edition of the Times, "Labor attacks newspaper hike."

Of all the unmitigated galls! They squawk on a "hike"? If they had any intelligence they would know that it is the incessant striking of labor for higher wages that has escalated the price of every commodity and service in the country.

One could laugh at the squawk but for the fact that one is appalled at the apparent ignorance shown. — S. J. Carr, Tete Jaune Cache, B.C.

Against Taking Life

Regarding the letter in the Times of March 4 criticizing Mrs. Brown's letter in the paper of March 1, let me say that I have never been concerned with any church law about abortion but am very much against the taking of life under any circumstances.

I wonder if any woman having an abortion without a qualm could bring herself to smother a new-born child as poor Chinese peasants were known to do during times of famine.

Also I wonder if Mrs. Morrison has had her fifth and unwanted child.

If people do not want babies, they should conduct themselves accordingly. — Mother of Four.

Two Faces—Like Janus

By MAURICE WESTERN from Ottawa

THE MINISTER OF FINANCE has brushed aside criticisms of the Canada Development Corporation with the observation that Panarctic Oils Limited, the consortium in which the government has a 45 per cent share, has proven a profitable venture. It is unquestionably true that Panarctic's holdings in the northern islands are much more valuable than they were in December, 1967, when Arthur Laing announced the arrangement. Apart from the corporation's own gas discoveries, the situation in the Arctic has been transformed by the development of a major field on the Alaskan coast, an event which could not have been foreseen in 1967.

Western

The trouble with Mr. Benson's argument is that it does very little to help the case for the CDC.

In the first place, no CDC was required for the Panarctic venture. In the second, it is at least questionable on Mr. Benson's theory whether a development corporation with the peculiar credentials of the CDC would have invested so heavily in Panarctic.

As Mr. Laing explained at the time, Panarctic was a "unique project." He was speaking, of course, in the Canadian context, because governments for various reasons had participated in such consortia in other parts of the world. But it was a new type of undertaking for Canada and the participation of government was justified by considerations going well beyond the usual calculations of profitability.

In the wider sense, however, Panarctic was the latest in a long series of government interventions in the economy dictated by national considerations. One of the earliest was the Pacific Railway; others include the Crown companies which it is proposed to sell to the Canada Development Corporation.

Free Hand

In each of these cases, the government — since it was the government and not bound by ambiguous terms of reference — had a free hand to deal with particular situations. It did not have to worry, as the CDC, if it gets that far, will have to do, about anxious shareholders. It relied on the tax power. On the other hand, it was answerable to Parliament. The CDC will not be so answerable because the theory is that it is to be proof against political pressures.

The government accordingly went ahead without benefit of a development corporation. Some of its venture proved sound and others are still tax supported.

The CDC will be very unlike Panarctic. It will not represent a single investment. It will be expected to invest in the shares or securities of any corporation owning property or carrying on business related to the economic interests of Canada. It may, in fact, "invest in anticipation of profit in a business carried on outside Canada."

In any given case, therefore, the CDC will have to balance the prospects and risks of one investment against those of others. This will not be easy because the director, unlike those of ordinary corporations and unlike the government, are supposed to think in terms of profit and a national benefit at the same time.

On the doubtful assumption that the corporation will be immune to political pressures, would it have been the answer to the problems faced in 1967 by Arthur Laing? As that minister, with characteristic frankness, observed at the time: "This is a risk venture. There is no certainty of oil will be found. It is certain no oil will be found unless exploration is carried out. This announcement signals the beginning of search, not certain success."

No Shareholder Risk

The government, as noted, was not risking shareholder money. Even so the impression in Ottawa at that time was that Mr. Laing had encountered much skepticism and opposition and had carried his project only after a difficult struggle in cabinet. The CDC, in such a situation, would be risking shareholders' money. Would it if genuinely independent — be bolder than ministers with resort to the public purse?

Mr. Benson's problem is that his creature is Janus-faced. On the one hand, it looks to potential investors, promising to put their money to the most profitable use. The CDC will operate on the best business principles, being directed by outstanding men whose judgment cannot be influenced by governments, deputy ministers or parliamentarians swayed by normal money-losing considerations. On the other hand, it looks to nationalist sentiment, suggesting — albeit vaguely and warily — that it will keep Canada Canadian through rescue operations where those guided by the best business principles have failed to rush in with funds.

Which is the true face? Probably the latter, since the corporation at the outset — and possibly for some years to come — will be a government venture and thus subject to the pressures which daily beat upon government. The critics who suggest that Mr. Benson will have difficulty in finding directors are probably right; the government can usually find directors if the price is right. It may be more difficult to keep them if the corporation reaches the point at which it must justify the faith of its sponsors by making money for the shareholders while pursuing its loftier objectives.

Looking Back

From the Times of March 9, 1971:

A rather startling state of affairs in the educational facilities of Victoria was brought to light at the monthly meeting of the board of school trustees last night.

A deputation from the northern portion of the city waited upon the board and called attention to the fact that two hundred and fifty of the children of that rapidly developing portion of the community were without educational accommodation through the present inadequate facilities.

SHELFORD

Synthetic Food 'Protection' Goes Too Far

An Editorial

That anti-synthetic food legislation that Agriculture Minister Cyril Shelford is pushing through the legislature is a tricky bit of business and if the opposition doesn't catch on to its potential for mischief we'd be very much surprised.

What Mr. Shelford seeks is nothing less than full governmental power to say that no one shall manufacture, process, sell, offer for sale, or even have in his possession for sale, any synthetic food product that isn't specifically exempted by regulation.

Sweeping? That's not the half of it. This bill also would give the government the authority to determine what is a synthetic food in the first place. Penalties for breaching the law would be a fine as high as $500.

Synthesis is a fancy word open to pretty broad interpretation. The meaning that Mr. Shelford must have in mind is the production of something in a manner unlikely to occur in nature — artificially, in other words, as opposed to natural growth.

Legal Absurdity

Because of the chemicals and other arcane substances appearing increasingly these days in the most commonplace foodstuffs, drawing an arbitrary line between what's "pure" and what is "artificial" is a legal absurdity. Mr. Shelford, of course, would get around this neatly. If Mr. Shelford says that some foodstuff is synthetic, it's synthetic.

From what the minister has said, in selling his bill and in the past, the particular things he wants to protect the consumer and the farmer from are imitation meat, milk and fruit-juice.

The Japanese are said to be doing fabulous things with soybean and cottonseed oils, and even protein man-made from petroleum. They're creating steaks and chops and hamburger and weiners and low and fish out of this lowly material, spinning it as though they were producing cotton or plastic, and making it, much of the time if not always, both nutritious and palatable.

Fascinating Field

Artificial milk, which has been selling well enough in the lower-income areas of the United States to worry the dairy industry, can be either a skim milk base fortified with vegetable oils or a grain protein base similarly beefed up.

While not all of this artificial food is cheaper than the real McCoy — the milk is — it is a field that fascinates scientists, and should equally fascinate politicians. It offers hope, at least, of filling the bellies of the large, and growing, part of the world population that is either starving or close to it.

Recognizing the targets of Mr. Shelford's legislation is one thing, however, seeing them as a threat, either to the consumer or to the farmers whose interests his portfolio directs him to serve, is quite another.

How Can He Know?

Mr. Shelford "could not say" how extensively synthetic foods are sold in B.C. If he doesn't know this, how can he possibly know that extraordinary legislation is required to protect us from them?

Mr. Shelford says we must be guarded from synthetic foods that are sub-standard and deceptively advertised or packaged. But why is extraordinary provincial protection required when the federal food and drug branch already polices the one and the federal consumer affairs department the other?

If this government can fine us $500 for possessing for sale an ersatz steak, as though it were a banned narcotic, what is to stop it from banning margarine, a little ersatz itself, or for that matter any other foodstuff seen as a competitor to the domestic farm industry?

Why Are We Hedging on Ban Of 'Riot-Control' Gas in War?

By JOHN C. POLYANI

(Dr. Polyani is professor of chemistry at the University of Toronto. He wrote this article for The Globe and Mail.)

"No single international activity... rates higher priority in the opinion of this Government than the pursuit of effective arms-control and arms-limitation agreements," Prime Minister Pierre Trudeau told the House of Commons on Oct. 24, 1969.

Arms-control agreements, like other treaties, are (as their critics are fond of pointing out) just scraps of paper. Their value lies, however, not in the pieces of paper, but in the clear affirmation, by the signatories, of some common interest.

One of the earliest arms-control agreements recognized, and made explicit, a common interest among many nations that the scope of warfare should not be allowed to extend to the use of any sort of poison.

The Protocol for the Prohibition of the Use in War of Asphyxiating, Poisonous or Other Gases, and of Bacteriological Methods of Warfare, known as the Geneva Protocol, was signed at Geneva on June 1, 1925. It was subsequently ratified and became binding upon 85 nations, Canada among them. The U.S. Senate did not ratify the treaty (it never, in fact, voted on it).

Last Aug. 19, President Richard Nixon submitted the Geneva Protocol to the Senate "with a view to receiving the advice and consent of the Senate to ratification." Some time in the next few months the Senate, through its Foreign Relations Committee, will consider the matter. It is highly likely that it will recommend ratification.

There is, however, a grave danger that it will at the same time attempt to limit the scope of the protocol by concurring with the view of the Secretary of State William Rogers (report of Aug. 11, 1970, addressed to President Nixon) that it is "the United States' understanding of the protocol that it does not prohibit the use in war of riot-control agents and chemical herbicides."

Regrettably Canada has expressed a similar view. On March 24, 1970, Canadian Ambassador to the United Nations George Ignatieff explained to the Conference of the Commission on Disarmament in Geneva that "Tear gas and other riot-control agents are not included in this commitment because their use in war presents practical problems in relation to the use of the same agents by police and armed forces for law enforcement purposes, that require detailed study and resolution."

Most other nations believe Any problems can be solved

Those who are experienced in sniffing the diplomatic wind will take heart when they read that final phrase. The question is clearly not regarded as being closed.

How serious are the "practical problems" which our government believes preclude — pending further study — the inclusion of riot-control agents among those prohibited by the Geneva Protocol?

In the view of the great majority of nations there are no insurmountable problems. In December, 1969, the matter was put to the vote by the United Nations General Assembly. The Assembly voted 80 to 3 that the use of riot-control agents, and also herbicides, in warfare, was prohibited by the Geneva Protocol.

Thirty-six nations, among them Canada and most of the other members of the North Atlantic Treaty Organization, abstained.

In excluding riot-control agents from the protocol, Canada is clearly supporting a minority interpretation. It does not at once follow that the Canadian view regarding the "practical problems" of including riot-control agents under the protocol is mistaken, nor that this view threatens the future of the protocol.

There is, however, evidence to indicate that the Canadian view is indeed a wrong one and, worse still, that this view if it were to prevail could rob the protocol of its force and value.

Taking the more important point first, why should one fear that the exclusion of tear gas and other riot-control agents from the general prohibition could have the effect of wrecking the protocol?

The reason is that these devices when employed under conditions of warfare (but not when used in police-type actions) are subject to a stage by stage escalation until they reach a point where they have quite clearly ceased to be riot-control agents and have therefore become chemical weapons of a type that are prohibited by the protocol. Inevitably opinions will differ as to the point at which this dangerous threshold has been crossed.

When riot-control agents were first employed by the United States in Vietnam in 1965, Dean Rusk, then secretary of state, explained that "we do not expect that gas will be used in ordinary military operations... the

Their use in war escalates
To become chemical weapons anticipation is, of course, that these weapons will be used only in those situations involving riot-control or situations analogous to riot-control." This was the intention. What happened was quite different.

The fullest account of the ensuing escalation is to be found in a study recently published by the Carnegie Endowment for International Peace.

The escalation in the use of riot-control (or "harassing") agents has been in the amounts of chemicals, the nature of the chemicals, the types of delivery systems, and the manner of employment. Nearly 20 million pounds of these chemicals have been sent to South Vietnam since 1965. The chemicals began by being CN and DM; CN is the standard police teargas and DM (Adamsite) is a vomiting agent. Subsequently CS, then CS1, followed by CS2, were introduced. Each was considered to be somewhat more effective than its precursor.

At the same time more effective methods of delivering the agents were being developed. The police hand-grenade was supplemented by launched grenades, four-inch chemical mortars, 105 millimeter howitzer shells, portable rocket-launchers, high-capacity blowers, bombs, bomb-clusters, and bulk aerial delivery systems consisting of 55-gallon drums equipped with a burstster charge.

Still more significant than this proliferation in the types of hardware was the concurrent elaboration in the modes of employment. Harassing agents came to be used under many, if not most, of the circumstances in which other chemical weapons (if they were not prohibited) might be used.

These included "area interdiction" (the dispersal of persistent harassing agents over a large area), many types of defensive action (for example, as a shield behind which troops could withdraw) and a large variety of offensive operations (in general as a means of forcing the enemy out of cover, or temporarily incapacitating him, prior to a conventional attack).

An active chemical corps was brought into being, whose task it was to see that these weapons were available and effective.

The process of keeping weapons effective under the changing conditions of war involves a constant risk that the ill-defined boundary which separates the permissible from the prohibited gases will be crossed.

Harassing agents, in the Canadian view, as in the U.S. view, are permissible; incapacitating agents are (in the views of both governments) definitely prohibited. The line that separates the two is a fine one.

The alternative to attempting to draw this fine line is to concede that riot-control agents are prohibited under the Geneva Protocol. The Canadian government has held back from this step for fear that this might somehow preclude the use of tear gas in (genuine) riot-control situations, by police forces.

A bizarre compromise
By British government

The British government, prompted by the same fear, has made a compromise which is bizarre even in a nation famous for compromise; it has ruled that CN and DM are prohibited by the protocol, but CS (which is being used by British troops in Northern Ireland) is permitted.

The Geneva Protocol, as its title clearly states, has to do with "the use in war of... gases" — but only with their use in war. Many nations which interpret the protocol as banning the use of riot-control agents in war feel entirely free to use these agents in the course of police action, where the alternative is to use bullets, and the intention is clearly to save lives.

It appears evident from experience that there is a place here where we can indeed hope to draw a line. There will, inevitably, be cases of doubt as to when a police action can legitimately be described as a police action, but these cases will surely be the exception, and will incur little risk of undermining the protocol.

It is greatly to be hoped that the Canadian study of this question, which Mr. Ignatieff's statement of March 24, 1970, called for, will be treated as a matter of urgency.

Problems of Population Control

By JEAN-PIERRE DUMONT
Le Monde

At the root of the laws adopted by the Japanese Diet in 1948 and 1955 to curb the tidal wave of babies lay, first of all, the reaction of a conquered country.

Before the war Japan had experienced a very great increase in population, which after the war gave rise to the fear of overpopulation in a diminished territory.

The progressive broadening of the law and the dissemination of information on contraceptive procedures by the press, radio, and films, in particular, led to a considerable drop in the birth rate.

Between 1949 and 1957, the number of births showed a decline never seen in any country in such a short period.

The number of births fell from 2,697,000 in 1949, that is 33 per 1,000 persons, to 1,567,000 in 1957, or 17.2 per 1,000.

Contraception, abortion, and to a very small extent, sterilization, were the three methods used by the Japanese to bring down the birth rate. In the 15 years between 1950 and 1965 the number of couples using contraceptives multiplied 2.5 times.

The proportion of births avoided because of sterilization has remained fairly low. The high cost of the operation and hospitalization explain the limited use of this procedure.

On the other hand, the low cost of abortion has resulted in an extraordinary rise in recorded abortions: 246,000 in 1945, 638,000 in 1951, 1,068,000 in 1959, 1,170,000 in 1965. The number of abortions progressed steadily until 1965. It stayed at that level for a while and fell back to 744,000 in 1969.

The fertility rate has declined seriously. Whereas the average Japanese woman had five children in 1928 and 4.3 in 1949, she had 2.5 in 1954 and 2.1 in 1969. The result is that the Japanese generations born between 1931 and 1940 will not reproduce their own number.

The success of the Japanese population policy is such that it has profoundly upset the age-group structure. In the years to come, this will pose delicate economic and financial problems for the government.

The group of those under 15 years of age represented 35 per cent of the population in 1950 but only 24 per cent in 1970. The relative size of this group will drop even more by the year 2000, when it will account for 20 per cent of the population.

Similarly, the age-group from 15 to 65, which has increased considerably in 20 years (22 million more between 1950 and 1970), will grow at a slower rate between now and 2000. On the other hand, the over-65 age-group will increase by a factor of six in a period of 50 years: from 4 million in 1950 to 24 million in 2000.

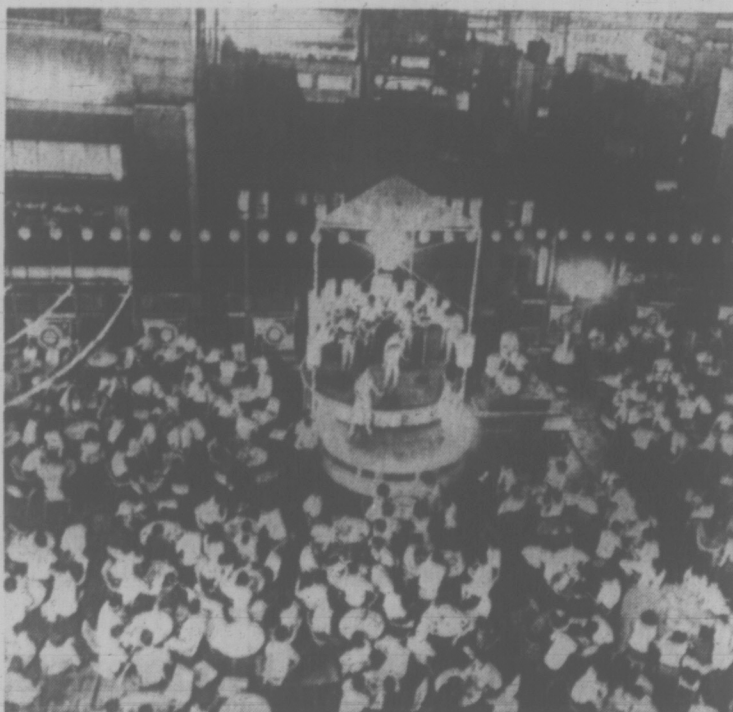

As Population magazine says: "In the 20 years from 1950 to 1970, the age structure of the population has moved from a profile similar to that of the developing countries to a picture close to that of northern European countries."

There will be considerable repercussions on the job market and old-age policy. The working population, which has sharply increased in recent years, will stabilize in the years to come, and extension of the school age will aggravate the employment situation.

Japan will, no doubt, then be led to "welcome an increasing number of foreign workers." It will thus find itself in the position of Western Europe today.

The purchasing power of the retired will become one of the more difficult problems for the Japanese government, because the majority of the growing number of Japanese who will live on old age pension alone will not have contributed to a retirement fund in their youth.

The evolution of Japan's population offers a number of lessons. Among other warnings, it underlines the dangers of too sudden a variation in the birth rate, which can in a few years have repercussions on the working population and on the development of economic and social progress.

B.C. Assessors 'Officially Gagged'—Opposition

By PETER McNELLY

Liberal Leader Pat McGeer charged Monday that the government has "officially gagged" provincial assessors in a move to keep the public from knowing the full story on the relation between land values and assessments.

During debate on second reading of a bill to amend the Assessment Equalization Act, McGeer made his charge on the basis of a letter he received last month from an anonymous provincial assessor.

In the letter, dated Feb. 7, the assessor said he was concerned that the amendment — which limits assessment increases to 10 per cent a year on individual pieces of property — was covering for "some nefarious scheme" to which he may have to become a part.

McGeer said he had no doubt that the amendment "is to keep property taxes down for promoters who are wheeling and dealing in real estate."

And he asked the government to withdraw the bill and refer it to the legislature's municipal affairs committee.

Accompanying the letter, McGeer said, was a directive from J. O. Moore, B.C.'s surveyor of taxes, dated Feb. 5, budget day, telling assessors to deal with property owners only on an individual basis.

Reading from the directive, McGeer quoted Moore as saying that the department "takes a conservative position" on having assessors attend group meetings of bodies like municipal councils and ratepayers' associations.

The directive asked assessors to get permission from the government if they want to attend group meetings. McGeer said this was nothing more than "a directive gagging all provincial assessors in British Columbia."

Discussions at group meetings, said the directive, could prove "embarrassing."

Both the Liberal and New Democrats maintain that the amendment will result in higher taxes for the small property and homeowners and give large tax savings to land speculators.

They say this because speculative lands can increase greatly in value, sometimes two and three times their worth on the basis of selling prices, but assessment increases on these lands now are restricted to 10 per cent a year.

Premier Bennett said the amendment is designed to prevent the provincial homeowners' grant from being eaten up by increased assessments.

He said the 10 per cent rule will not apply if the character of the property or its improvements change, its physical characteristics change, or new improvements are built upon the property. He also said assessments can be ordered changed by the province's assessment commissioner.

David Brousson (L—North Vancouver—

Capilano) said he wondered whether Bennett really understands the bill. He said it will actually prevent equity in assessments among school districts with the result that rural areas will receive a disproportionate share of the province's education grants.

Brousson said he doubted whether the assessment commissioner is interested in achieving equity, because no one is allowed to get meaningful figures from his office which show the relation between assessments and real market value.

If Bennett wants to protect homeowners, he said, it can give deferred payments to senior citizens and special mill-rate adjustments in cases where assessments have jumped greatly.

Robert Strachan (NDP—Cowichan-Malahat) adjourned the debate.

Fuel Tax Hike 'Excessive, Unnecessary,'

The New Democrats and Liberals Monday attacked the government's motor fuel tax increases as unnecessary, excessive and inflationary.

Both opposition parties voted against the government on second reading of the bills to increase gasoline taxes and motor-fuel taxes.

Premier Bennett defended the gasoline tax — already in effect — by saying it would cost the average driver between $5 and $10 a year. And he said the tax was necessary to make certain that revenues from highways use kept pace with the costs of highway construction and repairs.

Bennett said B.C. still has the lowest gasoline taxes, at 15 cents a gallon, in Canada, but has the highest highway construction costs in the country.

Raise Money From Other Areas

Bob Williams (NDP—Vancouver East) blasted the taxes as a "smokescreen," because the government could have raised the money from other areas, such as resource industries.

"We don't need to increase taxes in British Columbia. The premier has been hoarding surpluses for years in B.C., putting them in special funds," Williams said.

He said the tax is going to hurt lower-income groups and lower their standard of living.

Liberal Leader Pat McGeer said the increases are simply "over-taxation." And he noted that Bennett's revenue surpluses between fiscal years 1967-68 and 1969-70 had been approximately $100 million a year.

McGeer predicted none of the revenue from these taxes will be used to improve or construct highways. He said the estimates for this year show no increase from last year's $80 million allotment for highway construction.

But he said the government shows it intends to get $93.5 million from gasoline taxes this coming year, $23.5 million more than last year.

Robert Strachan (NDP—Cowichan-Malahat) said the increase is inflationary. He said an economic report from the department of industrial development, trade and commerce predicts increased sales of petroleum products as well as price increases.

These will come on top of the government's increased taxes, Strachan said.

'Co-Op Would Reduce Costs'

William Hartley (NDP—Yale-Lillooet) said the government could reduce gas prices by 50 per cent if it started a co-op, or government refinery.

And Alex Macdonald (NDP—Vancouver East) said he could understand the tax increases if the government would use the money for some socially useful purpose such as providing free public transportation.

In debate of tax increases for colored gasoline and motive-fuels, opposition members said they were unnecessary and a violation of Bennett's election promises.

Williams said the diesel tax would be passed along by the trucking industry through a series of stages to the consumer level.

In other debate, the Synthetic Food Products Act was given second reading then referred to the legislature's agriculture committee.

Agriculture Minister Cyril Shefford said the bill is not "intended to stop the sale of synthetic foods such as orange crush or lemon jello."

Purpose of the bill is to make sure "the consumer knows very clearly what he's buying, and if he wants to buy an inferior synthetic product he should have the right to do so," Shefford said.

Second Reading on Air Space

The Air Space Titles Act also received second reading. It was then referred to the standing committee on municipal affairs.

Attorney-General Leslie Peterson said the bill is necessary to develop a simple and effective way of registering who owns air space.

This is particularly important in the high-rise areas of cities, he said.

Peterson said the bill differs from the Strata-Titles Act in that the possibility of surface rights on land to be owned by one party and air space rights above it to be owned by another must be accommodated.

In debate on second reading of the Act to Amend the Taxation Act, Bennett said a Real Property Administrative Committee will be created to administer tax sales of land.

Members of the committee will be from the departments of the attorney-general, finance, and lands forests and water resources. Bennett noted that previous practice has been to auction lands on which taxes have not been paid for two years.

The amendment retains a person's right to have approximately two years to pay his taxes before the land is sold.

Jim Lormier (NDP—Burnaby-Willingdon) said the amendment is good, but he regretted it took an article in Maclean's magazine which showed how "organized efforts" were buying up tax sale properties.

And Allan Williams (L—West Vancouver-Howe sound) said he regretted that the amendment doesn't say how the committee will dispense with properties acquired under the act.

Province Takes 'Dirty Money' On Smoke Tax

The provincial government was accused Wednesday of taking "dirty money" from the lower-income groups through its new cigarette and tobacco tax.

New Democrats and Liberals voted against second-reading approval for a bill instituting the tax which went into effect Feb. 5 and raises the price of a 25-pack of cigarettes by five cents.

'ISN'T ENOUGH'

Government members were unanimous in backing the bill and one of them, Scott Wallace (SC—Oak Bay) said the only "mistake" in the tax is "it isn't enough."

He said the government should have left the social services tax on cigarettes, pushing the net tax on a 25-pack to eight cents instead of five.

Liberal Leader Pat McGeer said the tax is "dirty money" because it comes from a harmful habit.

He said he was dismayed and angry with the federal government for not taking strong action to eliminate cigarette and tobacco advertising.

The only excuse for supporting the bill is that it would reduce smoking, but it won't, said McGeer.

CREATES DRAIN

Wallace said it is reasonable for smokers to help provide new tax revenue when there is no doubt that smoking creates a serious drain on health care facilities.

Acting Opposition Leader Eileen Dailly said she was glad Premier Bennett didn't moralize and suggest the tax would reduce smoking when he opened debate.

It is "just another sales tax" hitting the lower income groups hardest because they can least afford to pay, she said.

'GIVE UP SMOKING'

Attorney-General Leslie Peterson took issue with that argument, saying: "Anybody can give up smoking."

"What better place for new taxation than on non-essential luxury items that are harmful?" he asked.

Garde Gardom (L—Vancouver-Point Grey) urged Bennett to consider his own previously introduced private

Inflation Spurring Strife

By STEPHEN CROALL

STOCKHOLM (Reuters) — A government threat to impose a lockout on three-fifths of Sweden's 5,000-member-officer corps has upset both the general public and military leaders.

The threatened lockout is the culmination of a series of increasingly bitter confrontations between the government and striking public employees in Sweden.

The conflict erupted Feb. 1 when 2,500 members of the Confederation of Professional Associations (SACO), most of them employed in local government and social welfare, went on strike for higher pay.

They were joined four days later by another 4,000 state employees, including 600 train controllers attached to the Federation of Government Officers (SR). This meant that all passenger rail services came to a halt.

Local government officials hit back by locking out employees from their own offices, and the unions retaliated with further strikes.

LOCK OUT TEACHERS

The battle came to a head Feb. 19 when the government locked out 30,500 civil servants, including 35,000 teachers.

The Stockholm authorities then spectacularly threatened the world's first lockout of military officers—three-fifths of whom belong to the professional unions.

The Swedish defence staff did not see the situation in the light of industrial action and reaction.

Gen. Stig Synergren, the supreme military commander, said such a lockout would also mean 30,000 of the country's 45,000 drafted servicemen would have to be sent home. He said Sweden's preparedness for an emergency would be lowered and warned that this would shake the outside world's confidence in Sweden's will to defend itself from attack.

Only 30 hours before the unique lockout was scheduled to start March 4, the government postponed it for a week.

COSTS $24 MILLION

But the rail strike had already cost the country $24 million, railway officials said, and speculation was growing the government would have to step in.

Intervention could take the form of compulsory arbitration by a special tribunal, or of a temporary law to impose a forcible peace on the entire troubled labor scene.

Both Premier Olof Palme and Finance Minister Gunnar Straeng indicated that such measures were under consideration. But they also emphasized the government's reluctance to make any arbitrary moves except as a last resort.

During the last decade, Sweden has established a reputation as a model industrial society. Strikes were rare, its sophisticated cated labor union machinery purred smoothly along, Swedish workers were conscious of the nation's well-being, and the Social Democrat government watched benevolently from the sidelines.

But a rash of stoppages and increasing union dissatisfaction in the spring of 1969 gave early warning of a rapid series of wildcat strikes a year later.

These were started by a two-month conflict involving miners at the state-owned iron-ore fields of northern Sweden.

Some commentators saw the development as a symptom of fundamental unrest in Swedish society. But others put it down to worker discontent with the centralization of the union hierarchy, which was felt to be out of touch at the local level.

The latest clash with the professional associations, however, has nothing at this stage to do with industrial workers. It can scarcely be described as the continuation of a trend but rather as a sign of the inflationary times, and an indirect result of a government pledge to give wage priority to lower-paid workers.

It could lead to the government being forced for the first time into direct intervention, and legislation which would be denounced as anti-labor. It is already under increasing pressure from the right wing to revoke the civil servants' right to strike, granted only five years ago.

The public service officers say they are taking home smaller pay packets today than in 1969, and that routine salary increases have been eaten up by higher prices and taxation.

When negotiations for a new wage agreement began, the civil servants' unions put in claims for hikes of between 18 and 22 per cent. These were immediately rejected by the government's collective bargaining board and neutral arbitrators were duly called in.

DEADLOCK OCCURS

At this point, deadlock set in. The civil servants maintained they had been left behind in the overall wages scene during recent years, while the government insisted there was no economic justification for increases on the scale they demanded.

This confrontation coincided with a heavy balance-of-payments deficit. The government had no alternative but to present the country with a highly-restrictive budget and to impose a total price freeze in an effort to curb galloping inflation.

Finance Minister Straeng warned in his budget speech in January that the Swedish economy would not be able to cope with big wage claims which he anticipated from unions trying to compensate for tax and price increases in recent months.

The government's pledge to lower-paid workers was also cited as a reason for rejecting the civil servants' demands.

FEAR CHALLENGE

Underlying the administration's desire to quell the civil servants' bid was a lurking fear of a direct challenge from the giant Confederation of Trade Unions which represents 90 per cent of Sweden's industrial workers.

In a significant change of pattern from previous years, the confederation announced it would not present its own wage demands for the forthcoming two-year period until it saw exactly how much increase the civil servants received.

It was at that point that the critical upsurge of strikes by professional workers and lockouts by the authorities began.

For decades, the equalization of wages has been an important objective and a matter of common accord in Swedish society. But the professional and white-collar workers have called the equalization principle into question by insisting that their living standards should not decline in the process.

Board May Aid With Copy of Act

Victoria's rental advisory board has asked the province for 500 copies of the B.C. Landlord and Tenant Act to help solve rental grievances, avert legal entanglements and avoid costs.

Still in a cautious, information-providing form, the Advisory Board, headed by Ald. Robert Baird, met for the third time Monday to discuss rental grievance cases.

Baird told the board, which as yet has no legal status, that Mayor Courtney Haddock has agreed to form a small technical committee to decide whether a bylaw should be written to give some teeth to the board.

NOT RESPONSIBLE

Meanwhile, the board is burdened with the self-imposed duty of providing what information it can to help solve landlord-tenant problems — without becoming responsible for its suggestions.

The board passed a motion to ask the provincial government to provide 500 free copies of the pertinent legislation. When a complaint is directed to the board, members can send the complainant a copy of the act, with the pertinent sections underlined.

A covering letter would state that the information is supplied "without prejudice."

Normally, the Landlord and Tenant Act is obtainable from the Queen's Printer for 24 cents a copy, the committee was told.

At earlier meetings, Baird stressed the point that Haddock wanted to avoid the creation of costly new office or staff in connection with the rental board.

CASE SOLVED

Among a number of cases discussed, the board heard of a case solved, even though the information provided was not strictly correct.

Baird said he had advised some tenants whose premises were apparently not suitably heated that a landlord must provide heat to 68 degrees. When the landlord was told this, the heating immediately improved, Baird said.

The 68-degree minimum is not included in the act, Baird was told, although it is included in Vancouver's own rental legislation. In any case, the provincial law does require a landlord to make his premises "habitable," Baird was told.

"Let's not worry about that," said a board member, "just as long as it worked."

Seven-Year-Old Matthew First to Survive Rabies

LIMA, Ohio (AP) — When Verna Winkler's eyes follow her seven-year-old son about the family farm there is often wonder in them.

Sometimes her mind goes back to those horror-filled days last fall when the boy,

Matthew, was bitten by a rabid bat, when he was wracked by the rabies virus and its concerted attack on his small body.

What brings the wonder to his mother's eyes is that until Matthew's illness there had been no record of a human surviving a confirmed case of rabies.

Now the symptoms are gone, and hopefully with them, the infection.

"He's just doing real good," says Dr. John Stechschulte, the boy's pediatrician. "He is in excellent physical condition . . . completely free of any signs or symptoms of the previous disease."

CAN AFFECT BRAIN

He said complications involving the brain, heart and lungs cause death in rabies. The body can defeat the virus itself.

"There's no cure for the disease. But we do feel that treating complications before they occur may be the secret."

"I expect that by summer he will be on completely unrestricted activity," the pediatrician said. "We're going to keep him away from crowds. There is a lot of infection now in schools so we will keep him in a home environment."

"No one has ever reached this point in recovery from rabies and we can't completely rule out a relapse, but we don't want anything to happen to contribute to one."

Matthew was bitten last Oct. 10 while he slept in his farm home at Wilshire, Ohio. His parents, Mr. and Mrs. Nicholas Winkler, responded to his screams and found a bat biting his left thumb.

The father captured the animal and tests proved it rabid.

'Soft' Lens Still Met With Caution

Victoria optometrists are still dubious about the "new" soft contact lenses.

"It's a whole different concept and we're still examining it," said one.

The lens has been on the market for about 10 years, but only researched thoroughly in the last six months, he said.

He was commenting on a speech at the annual convention of the Alberta Optometric Association by Dr. Richard Rogenthiel of New York, who has pioneered in the field of contact lenses in the last 15 to 20 years.

The doctor told the meeting the soft lenses provide wider peripheral vision, improve sharpness and eliminate spectacle blur.

Another local optometrist said the improvements depend on whether the patient has a high degree of stigmatism or not.

"If he does, he can't wear them," he said.

The soft lens has a complicated sterilization process and deteriorates more readily than the hard lens, he said.

The lenses are much larger and cover the entire cornea and part of the white of the eye, not just the pupil.

Deaths Protested

ROME (AP) — Members of the Italian women's liberation movement distributed leaflets at the women's clinic of Rome's University Hospital, claiming 50 women die every day in Italy because of the law against abortions. Police arrested a young woman and two surgeons performing an abortion last Saturday.

Prison Terms For Staging Phantom Operas

ROME (UPI) — A Rome court convicted 19 persons Sunday on charges they were connected with the staging of phantom operas to embezzle money from the government.

They included two former directors of entertainment in the ministry of tourism. The men, Franz de Biase and Nicola de Piro, were given more than four years in prison. The former director of the Rome Opera House, Mario Allegretti, was sentenced to four years.

Opera and certain other theatrical performances receive government subsidies in Italy.

Brenda

Brenda Mines Ltd. reports net earnings for the year ended Dec. 31 of $2.74 million.

The first annual report issued since the mine went into commercial production April 1, 1970 said the net earnings amounted to 65 cents a share.

Brenda president B. O. Brynneisen said that by the end of the year the company had retired a working capital loan of $4 million and accrued interest of $563,000 leaving outstanding debt of $58.3 million.

Warner

The annual shareholders' meeting of E. C. Warner Investments Ltd. was held on Monday. The company made a net profit of $3,000 during the year ended Sept. 30, 1970.

President E. C. Warner said that the company's principal subsidiaries, A-1 Steel and Iron Foundry Ltd., Melograin Milling Co. and Harbor Ferries Ltd., were all on a solid footing.

Trading profits in the first quarter of the year were $4,000, he said.

Nu-West

Nu-West Homes Ltd. had net income of $811,493 or 55 cents a share for the year ended Dec. 31, compared with $1.1 million or 68 cents a share for the year previous.

Total revenue increased 53 per cent to $28.2 million, up from $18.48 million in 1969.

The decreased earnings were mainly attributed to economic conditions.

Increased revenues came from contract sales, the sale of land, housing sales and income from rental properties.

Whonock

Profits were down one-third during 1970, the president of Whonock Lumber Co. reports. Net income per share was $1.06 compared with $1.56 in 1969.

Sales last year totalled $10.1 million, down from $11 million. Net income was $493,901 during 1970, $723,299 in 1969.

President Helmut Kneteman said income was reduced by unpegging the dollar, an unstable market for the employee-owned company's wood products and other problems.

Giant Mascot

Giant Mascot Mines Ltd. reports reconstruction of facilities destroyed by fire last year is nearing completion. Ancillary buildings will be ready for use by mid-month, while concrete and main structural work for the crusher, concentrator and filter buildings is in the final stages.

Major machinery is installed and work proceeds with electrical, plumbing, sub-floor, convevours and chutes and mechanical connections.

In its financial statement for the quarter ended Dec. 31, the company did not provide comparisons with a year ago due to the cessation of production. Working capital decreased $676,165 to $4.27 million at Dec. 31 and $3.59 million at Dec. 31.

Meanwhile, Giant Mascot has entered into an agreement to join the Panarctic consortium which is seeking petroleum in the Arctic Islands and has struck significant gas on Melville and King Christian Islands.

Great Plains

Deep wells are planned for the near future for two sites picked by Great Plains Development Co. of Canada Ltd. on Arctic Islands.

The first, scheduled to go 14,000 feet, will be sunk on Ellesmere Island near Eureka and will cost an estimated $3.8 million. Airlifting of equipment has started.

The second well, to go 12,000 on Loughheed Island, will be near Skybottle Bay.

Great Plains will have between 18-25 per cent interest in the wells after completion, but drilling cost will be borne entirely by other companies.

Hayes

Hayes Manufacturing Co. Ltd., a Vancouver-based heavy duty truck and trailer manufacturer, reports record sales volume of $10.7 million in the year ended Nov. 30, compared with $9.6 million in 1969.

Net income of $153,913 after taxes compared with 1969 net income of $144,404 before inclusion of a 1969 extraordinary non-recurring item of $60,732 on a sale of land and buildings.

Noranda

Noranda Mines Ltd. had increased sales and earnings in 1970 but president Alfred Powis says results "were disappointing in comparison with what they might have been."

The company had net earnings of $58.2 million of $2.41 a share on sales of $489.85 million in 1970 as against earnings of $54 million or $2.24 a share and sales of $454.3 million the previous year.

Revaluation of the Canadian dollar, declines in copper prices and strikes at the Geo mine in northwestern Ontario and British Columbia Forest Products plants were blamed for reducing potential by 60 cents a share.

Panarctic Discounts Oil Shows

CALGARY (CP) — Oil shows in an exploratory well on King Christian Island in the Arctic are not significant, Panarctic Oils Ltd. said Monday, but confirmed a major natural gas discovery.

Tests through production casing gave large flows of sweet (sulphur-free) gas, the company said in a release, and further production tests were under way to determine absolute flow capacity.

Published reports last week speculated the well had struck oil, making it the first such find for the private industry-federal government consortium.

The well was a continuation of a relief drilling which started last year after the first exploratory attempt on the island hit the natural gas formation, blew out of control and caught fire.

After the wild well was extinguished, the relief well was continued for another 700 feet into the producing formation.

The company withheld depth of pay zone and rate of flow.

King Christian Island is 1,700 miles north of Edmonton and about 150 miles north of Melville Island where the company hit gas last year.

Seabed Resources Conference Set

Control of natural resources discovered on the deep ocean bed will be subject of a conference called April 19-21 at Houston by professional engineers interested in offshore exploitation.

In the third annual meeting of its kind, 11 professional societies headed by the American Institute of Mining, Metallurgical and Petroleum Engineers, will discuss international control of mineral resources of the deep seabed.

The Maltese delegate to the United Nations and three attorneys will conduct a panel discussion on the subject. Arvid Pardo, a native of Italy, has been Malta's permanent representative to the U.N. since 1964, serving also as ambassador to the U.S. and Canada.

He will be joined by Northcutt Ely, a student of resource conservation; J. R. Stevenson, advisor to the U.S. state department; and Leigh S. Ratiner, chairman of the U.S. defence department advisory group on law of the sea.

Tax Tips

Tax Tips, a daily feature in the Times, is prepared by the Victoria District Office, National Revenue, Taxation. For additional information on preparation of your income tax return, write to the Victoria office of National Revenue, Taxation.

Q. Would you please tell me the difference in the expenses allowable for income tax purposes for a salaried nurse and a private duty nurse.

A. A private duty nurse in carrying on a business and is entitled to deduct reasonable expenses incurred in earning her income. A salaried nurse, on the other hand, may deduct only those expenses specifically allowed as a deduction from salary or wages by the Income Tax Act.

Q. Since a Social Insurance Number is required how do I get one?

A. You should obtain an application form from either the Post Office, a District Taxation Office, an Unemployment Insurance Office, or an office of the Department of National Health and Welfare. The application form should be completed and mailed as directed on the form.

Q. My father died last year and I paid all the funeral expenses. Can I claim these on my income tax return as deductions? I have always claimed my father as a dependent.

A. No, funeral expenses are not an allowable deduction for income tax purposes.

Q. My mother lives with us, and while her income is over $350, I don't charge her anything for her keep. Does this mean that I may claim her as a dependent?

A. No. You may only claim a dependent who has an income less than $350. The fact that you receive nothing from your mother does not entitle you to claim her as a dependent in this instance.

Q. I arrived in Canada in April last year and I am told that I have to pro-rate my $100 standard deduction for medical fees and charitable donations when filing my income tax return. What does this mean?

A. As explained in the Guide which accompanies your tax return, if you became subject to Canadian income tax for the first time in 1970, you need report only the income you earned after you arrived in Canada. On the other hand you are not entitled to claim personal exemptions and the standard deduction for the full year, either. For example, if you arrived in Canada on April 15 and you would have resided here for 260 of the 365 days last year and would be entitled to claim a standard deduction of 200-365 of $100 or $71.30 instead of $100. Your personal exemption would be calculated in a similar way.

Q. I am a garage mechanic and have to provide my own tools. These cost me $500. When completing my income tax return can I claim this expense as a deduction?

A. No. The cost of tools is not deductible from salary or wages.

Q. During the year I worked for two employers, one during the day and one during the evenings. My day job earned me $2,400 for the year and the evening job $1,800. However, both employers allowed the $600 basic exemption when calculating my Canada Pension Plan contributions. This means I have contributed to the plan for only $3,000 where I could have contributed on my total earnings minus the $600 basic exemption had I worked for only one employer. How do I go about making contributions on the extra $600.

A. You may make contributions on the extra $600 at a rate of 5.6 per cent. It will be necessary for you to use a T1 General Tax Return to make this calculation.

Q. The farm I operate is located seven miles from town. During the summer months we live on the farm, then move to town for the winter months. Can I claim on my income tax expenses such as taxes and repairs on the town house, for the portion of the year during which we live in it?

A. Expenses paid for the maintenance of your town house are considered to be a personal nature and are therefore not allowable as a deduction from income.

Q. I started a new business in 1970. Can you tell me what depreciation I can claim for income tax purposes?

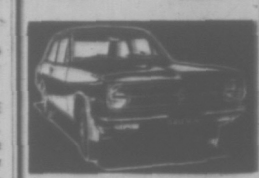

A. Capital cost allowances, sometimes referred to as depreciation, is allowed as a deduction. The rates vary with the type of asset. For example: Class 10 — cars, trucks, etc., 30%; Class 6 — frame and stucco buildings, 10%; Class 3 — steel, brick and concrete buildings, 5%. Rates for other assets may be obtained by reference to the Income Tax Regulations or from your local district taxation office. Special rates may apply to assets of a farmer or fisherman. For these, see the Farmer's and Fisherman's Guide. In the case of a new business that was not in operation for the full taxation year, the depreciation should be pro-rated on the basis of the number of days the business was in operation.

Q. I have rented out my farm on which there is a complete set of buildings which are not fully depreciated. Can I continue to claim capital cost allowance under Part XVII, or would I be required to claim under Part XI?

A. Your claim for capital cost allowance on the farm buildings must now be made under Part XI of the regulations. Capital cost allowance is recoverable on disposal of assets. This includes allowances claimed previously under Part XVII.

Trans-Canada Telephone Plans Digital Network

OTTAWA (CP) — The Trans-Canada Telephone System announced Monday it will build new ground in Canada by setting up a nationwide digital data communications network, principally for computers.

The system is expected to cost about $5 million in the first phase in 1971-72 when equipment is installed to link Montreal, Ottawa and Western Canada.

Z. H. Knapik, chairman of TCTS, told a news conference here: "We based our decision to develop and build this digital network on the continually increasing needs of computer communication users for higher quality transmission, higher speeds, greater quantities and lower costs."

Knapik explained that currently most data is carried over the voice telephone network by converting a coded, or digital, signal to a voice or analogue equivalent.

The digital network will first provide a link between Eastern and Western Canada. Later it will be extended to include all major Canadian cities.

Now Rules to Control Rules

By JOHN HAY

OTTAWA (CP) — The government, with its rash of regulations, was likened to the Roman emperor who, directed to write out his laws, etched them on tablets which he hung so high nobody could read them.

Gerald Baldwin, Conservative House Leader, made the analogy in debate on the government's statutory instruments bill, which is aimed at bringing bureaucratic and cabinet regulations—such as those imposed under the War Measures Act in October—into public and Commons scrutiny.

The bill would set up a new Commons committee to study most regulations.

It would also permit any citizen to inspect and obtain copies of most government regulations.

Today, the House debates a New Democrat motion asking the Commons to urge the government to appoint a cabinet minister to co-ordinate implementation of the royal commission on the status of women.

The motion asks for inclusion of housewives in the Canada and Quebec pension plans, ma-terity benefits under the Unemployment Insurance Act, adoption of a national day care act, initiation of a family planning program and equal treatment for women in the public service.

Labor Minister Bryce Mackasey is expected to introduce some of the report's recommendations as amendments to the Canada Labor (Standards) Code this week.

In the debate on the statutory instruments bill, Justice Minister John Turner acknowledged that Parliament has given great power to ministers, bureaucrats and various boards and commissions "beyond the power of the people to challenge."

The bill is intended to provide better control over these hundreds of regulations created every year, ensuring that the rights of individuals are protected.

Under the bill, they would all be registered with the clerk of the Privy Council to allow central control.

Mr. Baldwin offered an amendment that would specify that the new scrutiny committee operate under existing Commons committee rules, and have the power to recommend that regulations be approved, changed or repealed.

Mr. Turner said it would be inappropriate to set out the committee's rules in the bill.

The minister said the committee and the House should be left to organize the committee's work as its needs require.

Mr. Baldwin said a drafting oversight in the 1969 government reorganization bill removed the statutory authority of the Canada Gazette as the country's official gazette.

Publication in the weekly gazette is required before any regulation comes into force.

MIGHT BE DEFENCE

Mr. Baldwin said the oversight, amended in the present bill, might form "a valid legal defence" against charges under the regulations of the War Measures Act imposed to combat Quebec terrorism last fall.

Marcel Lambert (PC—Edmonton West) suggested deleting the clause correcting the oversight because of a possible "retroactive penal effect on cases now before the court."

He suggested that because the gazette had no legality after July, 1969, the regulations published in it were also invalid.

His amendment was defeated in an informal voice vote.

Mr. Turner said the present bill merely confirmed the gazette's traditional status, "repairing a lapse."

Robert McCleave (PC—Halifax-East Hants) said the oversight illustrates the risk in dealing with omnibus bills in the Commons.

He called them "disorganization acts."

The House has devoted 15 days of debate to the reorganization bill, which includes authorization for the prime minister to appoint five new ministers of state for specific purposes, sets up an environment department and revamps the public service pension plan.

Andrew Brewin (NDP—Toronto Greenwood) supported Mr. Turner's view. The alternative to correcting the lapse would be indefinite confusion.

The bill provides that in a prosecution under a regulation, the government must show proof that it took reasonable steps to provide the regulation to groups "likely to be affected" by it.

Problems of Quebec Dominate NDP Meet

By MICHAEL HUGHES

NANAIMO, B.C. (CP)—Members of the New Democratic Party should be dedicated to federalism but at the same time be sympathetic to the problems of Quebec, a party meeting was told Monday.

In general, such party policy was agreed upon by all five candidates for the national NDP leadership at a meeting in this Vancouver Island community, in the home riding of NDP leader T. C. Douglas who retires in April.

Reaction to a resolution from the Quebec wing of the party affirming the right of self-determination for Quebec dominated the meeting of about 200 party faithful.

The resolution is to be presented at the party's national convention in Ottawa April 21-24 when a new leader will be chosen.

All five candidates — John Harney, former secretary of the Ontario NDP; David Lewis, party deputy leader and MP for York South; Frank Howard, MP for Skeena; James Laxer, a lecturer at Queen's University; and Ed Broadbent, MP for Oshawa-Whitby — agreed that the party should fight for Canadian unity.

Mr. Lewis was vehemently opposed to any talk of the separation of Quebec.

"I am convinced that it is doing a great disservice to Canada and a great disservice to the party to talk of the breaking away of Quebec from this country," he said.

The deputy leader suggested instead that it is up to the NDP to "unite the working people of Quebec with the working people of the rest of Canada."

Mr. Laxer, candidate of the left-wing waffle group, favored the resolution of the Quebec wing and the opinion of its president, Raymond Laliberte, that Quebec should have the right of self-determination.

He said the federal government should throw out the British North America Act as a basis for discussion when dealing with Quebec. There should be a meeting "on the basis of equality," he said, and not with some preconceived regulations laid down in the constitution.

Mr. Harney said it is important that in this matter of "self-determination" the right meaning be understood. He said it means not so much the right to have your own way, as the right of free choice.

He said it is very important that the party be determined to keep the country together but be ready to negotiate "among equals" on certain matters such as cultural and linguistic problems.

Mr. Broadbent echoed this and said any discussion with the Quebec wing of the party should be on the basis of a friendly debate among equals, "in a spirit of equality and friendship."

Mr. Howard agreed that there should be no talk at the federal level of the separation of Quebec because that would "give tacit consent for those in Quebec who want to leave and to the bigots who want to see it separated." Rather, he said, the party should be concerned with developing policies which would be designed to suit the political, social and economic needs of the people of Canada.

All candidates got in their licks at Prime Minister Trudeau for what they called his "conservative, reactionary form of federalism."

Mr. Lewis was the most outspoken on this point, referring to the Trudeau brand of federalism as "barren, rigid, inflexible and arrogant."

This rigid approach only adds to the resentment Quebecers feel toward the federal government, Mr. Lewis said.

Mr. Harney said that up to now Confederation has been "a conservative arrangement" and it is the duty of the NDP to change that.

The candidates are to meet in Vancouver today and in Abbotsford, B.C., Wednesday.

Five States May Order SST Ban

WASHINGTON (AP) — Proposals have been introduced in five state legislatures to ban the supersonic transport, either through outright prohibition of the SST or by setting limits for aircraft noise.

Bills aimed at trying to ban the plane are in committee in Maine, Massachusetts, New York, Michigan and Illinois, and an Iowa state representative says he plans to submit such legislation.

Proponents of a ban from all six states were told in Washington Monday that their efforts may be the only way to keep the controversial plane from flying.

Senator William Proxmire (Dem. Wis.), an opponent of the SST, told the group that more vigorous administration support, well-financed industry lobbying and the reported backing of AFL-CIO President George Meany may shift the congressional balance-of-power to proponents of the plane.

Congressional opponents of the SST seek to cut off further funds for development of the plane. The most common approach by state legislators opposing the plane is to propose noise limits, below the level of the SST.

7 Collisions In Hot Chase

VANCOUVER (CP)—A youth driving a stolen car Monday night led Vancouver police on a wild 15-minute chase at high speeds through several sections of the city. Before it was over there were seven collisions, four of them involving police vehicles.

A police spokesman said a youth, aged about 18, was arrested. He said in many instances the stolen vehicle went the wrong way down one-way streets and ignored stop signs.

In one of the collisions, an emergency ambulance was called after a police car was seriously damaged. It was not immediately known whether serious injuries were involved.

Fisherman Limps Back From Death

A View Royal sports fisherman rests in bed today, thankful to escape death from drowning and survive a hazardous two-mile crawl up steep cliffs to safety.

Bruce Allen, 43, of 109 Burnett, had been presumed drowned after a two-day search which began Sunday morning when his 15-foot runabout was found abandoned south of McCurdy Point in Saanich Inlet, south of the cement plant near Bamberton.

He arrived home Monday at 4 p.m., his knees raw from crawling and his legs an agony of aches.

The Times on Monday had reported that Allen was presumed drowned when his boat was found at 11 a.m. Sunday without a trace of him.

His ordeal began about 7 a.m. Sunday when, replacing some sparkplugs in his 60-horsepower outboard, he straightened up to ease a kink in his back.

reach her. The only thing I could do was head for shore." Allen figures he swam about 50 yards, fully-clothed, weighed down by leather boots, heavy jacket and pants.

"It's pretty hard to tell how far it was. I just kept thrashing my legs about. The last 10 feet were the worst—I could barely keep afloat. By the time my feet touched bottom only my nose was above water."

Allen rested, hoping some boat would spot him. None did.

Ahead of him lay the only choice left—a steep cliff, gorged with impassable gullies.

He started to climb. By 9 a.m. he was stalled.

"I guess it was all the thrashing around I did in the water. My legs were knotted up in Charley-horses. From then on it was work up another 50 feet, stop an hour, work on my legs and get going again."

Finally, he made the highway and collapsed.

"I was just the other side of Shawnigan Lake Road. I tried to hitch-hike but couldn't move far. I gave that up. I didn't want to be killed by a car after making it that far."

As he neared Shawnigan Lake Road he hailed a grader pulled over to the side. He explained who he was and at 3 p.m. he was riding slowly along the highway.

"I was so hungry by that time I could have eaten anything. The driver offered me a cigarette. I don't smoke but that one tasted good. It took my mind off my hunger."

A gnawing fear, even then, gripped him.

"I had left my wallet home and I had no money to phone my family. I wondered how they were—that was my biggest worry."

Near the Goldstream Inn the grader dropped him off and he made the final leg to his home in a truck driven by a friendly driver, who helped him make the final steps to the door.

An experienced outdoors-

Experienced woodsmen who have attempted to climb the cliffs to the highway describe the terrain as "treacherous and damned difficult and exhausting, even by a person who has not gone through the ordeal of almost-drowning."

"It was great. The house was full of people. I was so hungry I ate five ham sandwiches, two cheese ones, three oranges, and drank cups and cups of tea."

Will he go fishing again?

"Of course. My brother-in-law will be here next weekend and the four of us will be going out."

But, says Allen, he's not going to make the same mistake twice.

"From now on when I'm working in the stern of the boat I'm going to make sure I have a line on me—and a lifejacket."

He also says he's going to be more careful when it comes to motors.

"I knew my sparkplugs on the big motor were bad. I should have changed them Saturday night but we did something else instead."

"I should have known better—it was just plain stupid."

He could hear cars on the highway. The noise was deceptive.

When morning came he again began inching up the cliff face, 25 feet at a time, on his knees, with longer and longer periods in between.

One of the first things he intends to do is buy another lifejacket.

"I never wear my department of transport-approved one because it's too bulky. I'm going to get a floater jacket—or aircell one. I'd rather risk a fine than not have one on."

His wife, Alice, describes herself as the "happiest woman in the world today."

When her husband was reported missing, the Allens' daughter, Phyllis, 22, flew home from Calgary to join her mother and her two brothers, Brian, 17, and seven-year-old Gary.

SAANICH WARNING

Sewer Hookup Can Be Forced

Legal machinery is available to enforce a Saanich bylaw which allows two years' grace for residents to connect with sewers, municipal engineer Neville Life said today.

He was commenting on remarks by a resident Monday night at the Gordon Head and District Ratepayers' Association who said she has a properly functioning septic tank, does not want to pollute Finnerly Cove where the outfall is, and will refuse to hook up to the sewer. (See earlier story on page 19.)

Life said the municipal bylaw allows residents two years from the time the sewer line is built along the street to hookup, unless the medical health officer orders an immediate hookup because of pollution problems.

He said a refusal to hook up six or eight years ago led to the municipality letting a contractor for the installation and the cost was added to the property's tax bill.

COUNTS TELL

Life also said the Finnerly Cove outfall operates "well within" the Pollution Control Board standards as set out for the new Macaulay Point outfall in Esquimalt.

This has been shown by counts taken by the health department, he said.

The outfall at Finnerly Cove extends 1,300 feet out to sea discharging sewage at a depth of 44 feet from a 24-inch concrete pipe. It was built in 1961. Sewage is comminuted (chopped up) and chlorinated.

The 1966 sanitary sewerage study of the Greater Victoria area said there is "no problem" at Finnerly Cove, in contrast with other major outfalls.

Saanich Mayor Hugh Curtis said the sewer installations are being made within an area adjacent to the currently-sewered land in a five-year program which got 80 per cent approval in a referendum in 1968.

He said some septic tanks are troublesome and effluent finds its way into ditches and eventually into storm drains which flow into the sea.

Subdividers Should Pay Says Upward

The high cost of bringing water to new subdivisions in outlying areas should be paid for by the subdividers or eliminated by control over new development, the Greater Victoria Water Board was told today.

The board decided to seek a solution through the B.C. Public Utilities Commission which must approve any changes in the cost of water.

Greater Victoria water commissioner Ron Upward told board members today the lack of land remaining for subdivision near the central urban areas has stepped up subdivision building in the Metcosh, Happy Valley, Rocky Point-Pedder Bay area.

Subdividers pay for services in the subdivision, he said, but the water district must pay the high cost of bringing water out to the subdivisions.

Real Estate Head Named

Saanich businessman John Hicks has been appointed full-time executive director of the Victoria Real Estate Board, president-elect Norman L. Ross announced today.

Hicks replaces Catherine Godfrey, who had served the board some 15 years.

Ross, who is real estate manager of Canada Permanent Trust, replaces P. G. Jackson on the board. New vice-presidents are P. A. Petersen and J. A. Betts Jr., and directors are J. S. Boorman, J. A. Bruce, D. R. Fraser, C. H. Holland, Bryan Leverton, Noel Martin and P. A. Sivertsen.

CURTIS BOOSTS GOOD EMPLOYEE RELATIONS

City Labor Too 'Costly' for Saanich

Joint labor negotiations between Saanich and Victoria would result in Saanich picking up "costly" aspects of Victoria's contracts, Hugh Curtis said today.

The Saanich mayor was replying to comments by Victoria Mayor Courtney Haddock after Saanich rejected an attempt by the city to form a single bargaining unit for Greater Victoria municipalities.

Curtis also said joint bargaining could harm a "good working relationship" that his council has with its employees.

'NOT TAKEN LIGHTLY'

To bring in "highly skilled knowledgeable, professional negotiators is to lose something in relationships between management and employee," Curtis said.

Asked if he was suggesting that Victoria's management-employee relations were less desirable, Curtis said "I will leave you to draw your own conclusions."

Curtis said his council's decision not to join bargaining forces was "not taken lightly," and "as I recall, this view was pretty well unanimous."

Oak Bay's council Monday night directed Mayor Frances Elford to push for joint negotiations at the Inter-municipal Committee level.

Curtis said there are "certain long-standing aspects of the city's (labor) agreement which we believe are costly. The most costly of these, he said, is the ability of employees to convert unused sick leave into cash at retirement time.

This "will add up to many thousands of dollars," he said. "Saanich does not have it and we certainly don't want it."

Haddock had warned that separate negotiations results in "leap-frogging" by the unions—using contract gains in one municipality as ammunition for similar gains in another.

'NO DOUBT'

Curtis said "I appreciate the city's point of view—I don't agree with it." The only way to avoid leap-frogging is through a single contract for the whole of the province, he said.

Curtis said there was "no doubt" that the unions were concentrating on Saanich this year, and Saanich had defended the "extremely important principle" of "no parity with up-island units," whose labor settlements are based on levels of pay reached by the International Woodworkers of America.

"We found this to be completely unacceptable," Curtis said.

Curtis also said the union "recognized that we were prepared to go all the way" in negotiations this year, "and by all the way I mean strike, and that's the way I think it should be."

He said he believes in the "closest possible co-operation between all areas" of government, meaning school boards, municipalities and the Union of B.C. Municipalities.

ON A GREY DAY LATE in January, a little company trudged along a road and through a gate to pause by a memorial slab not often visited. A Buddhist priest gave a brief discourse, then offered up a prayer. One of the group placed a tribute of chrysanthemums on the stone. The gesture marked the end of a search and a pilgrimage.

The story back of both is a quiet one. You may find it sad, death, after all, is especially poignant when it takes the young, and Midshipman Haruma Kusano was scarce more than a boy when he died far from his island home.

Interpreted from the Japanese, his name signifies "Spring Horse." It is a lucky, thrusting name. But his luck and his spring ended in 1892, and the ship that brought him to our shores sailed without him.

An admiral who never forgot the friend of his youth has a place in the story. So does Rev. Takimichi Takahatake of Steveston Buddhist Church, who is preparing a parish history.

Takahatake was leading through old church records one day when he came on an entry that set him musing.

It dealt with a request made by a senior officer of the Japanese Imperial Navy when his flagship called at Vancouver some years before the Second World War. Admiral Monotake asked that a memorial service be held for a friend of long ago. They had been midshipmen together. The cruiser in which they served had visited Victoria late in the last century, and his friend had died here.

It was also recorded that a graveside service was held, the admiral attending.

But what cemetery? As a matter of church history, and also because he was moved by the account, Takahatake felt that he should find out.

He wrote to a Japanese exchange student, one of seven attending University of Victoria. She passed the question on to Canadian Armed Forces base—Royal Navy country when the two midshipmen came this way—and got the answer.

She would find the name she sought on a stone in the old Esquimalt naval cemetery off Colville Road.

With a Japanese-born instructor, some of the exchange students drove out to that quiet retreat by Gorge Vale golf course. At the top of a gentle slope, where the older markers stand in green turf, they found a carved granite stone that carried Kusano's name.

They felt that something more was owing to the memory of a young fellow countryman. A few weeks later, they returned, bringing chrysanthemums. The priest from the Steveston church came with them.

He would hold a simple service. Not all of them were of the Buddhist faith, and he would understand if these did not wish to take part. But all remained until the prayer had been spoken, and the flowers laid on the chiseled granite.

The chrysanthemums were gone when my wife and I paused there a couple of Sundays ago. But 79 years of weathering have failed to blur the inscription.

"In memory of Midshipman H. Kusano," it reads.

"Died at Esquimalt, Nov.

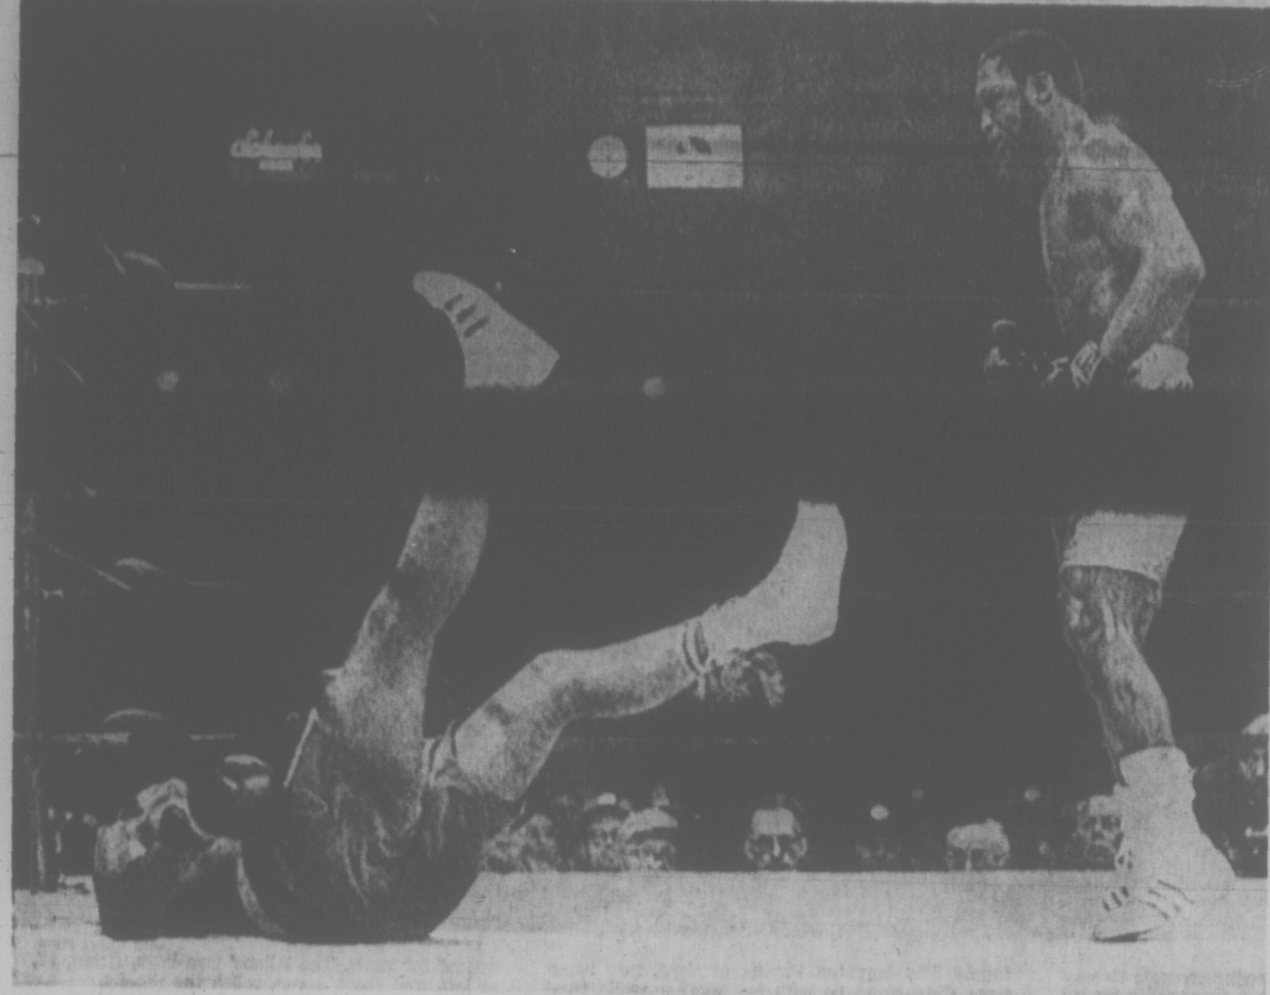

11, 1892, aged 22 years. Erected by the captain, officers and the comrades of HJMS Konogo."

A smaller marble tablet lettered in Japanese characters is set at one end of the slab, close to the trunk of a tall evergreen. Carved into the other end are an anchor and a cherry blossom—usignia of Japan's navy.

The cherry blossom is also the symbol of the samurai, the high-born warrior caste from which that still-young navy recruited its officers.

It does not linger to wither on the bough. It blooms and falls.

So with Haruma Kusano, whose friend sailed on to take his part in great naval engagements and to win an admiral's rank. The midshipman lies here, in good company.

HITTING DECK is Muhammad Ali while champion Joe Frazier watches effect of 15th-round punch, in their heavyweight title bout at New York.

BILL WALKER

It was a beaut, and that kind of a prize fight — the night of reckoning for Joe Frazier and Muhammad Ali. This was for the heavyweight boxing championship of all mankind, and the disputants didn't let down their admirers one little bit.

Not in Madison Square Garden, where the fight was held, nor around the world where it was telecast, nor in Victoria's Memorial Arena, where 2,062 fans paid $10 each to watch the closed circuit version of the scrap.

It was the richest ever fight, grossing in the neighborhood of $20 million, with $2.5 million for each man, and it was Victoria's richest sports event, too.

The gross gate here of $20,620 exceeded by about $2,000 proceeds from the exhibition game when Chicago Black Hawks played here three years ago.

And the crowd loved it, right from the start. If it was pro-Al, it was likely because the former champ came into the ring first. For when Frazier arrived, there was an equally loud outburst, the respect for Frazier being measured in the smattering of boos he received.

It was the same pattern through the battle. It was Ali they wanted to cheer on and marvel at; but in the end it was Frazier who had to be accorded his dues. He was the real champ. Ali, the blithe spirit, until almost the end, was in hospital. It was suspected he had a broken jaw.

If it wasn't the best-ever heavyweight bout, it will do until somebody proves otherwise, or until the rematch comes along. Because without question it was a dandy, even on the big screen (it could be bigger) at the Arena. Nobody should have felt cheated. If they did, they didn't recognize a classic when they saw one.

History will record it that Frazier won it fair and square, but very late, by a decision. He tossed the fight in the final rounds. He won five of the last six, in this book, gave Ali a real thumping in the 11th and had him hanging on for dear life.

He knocked Ali down, finally, in the 15th, and hurt him doing it. Ali was up again, right away, but time had run out. It was too late. He was empty now and nothing left but his courage and incredible ego. Pride dictated that if he was going to lose he would lose standing up. He did.

Actually Ali the braggart, had no reason to feel embarrassed about his showing, and he didn't crawl across the ring to congratulate Frazier as he said he would if he lost. There was no need to. He had to be admired in defeat. He gave Frazier a neat boxing lesson in the early rounds, and punished him severely in the process. His classic jabs earned him many valuable points, and saved him much battering. There was always the thought that when he followed his flicking jab with a right cross that he may stop Frazier's relentless charge. But he could never unload the final crushing blow he needed so badly. Then he took all Frazier had to offer. And he never whimpered, not once, not openly, when it was obvious that he was hurt, and was going to lose.

Great as it was from a spectator's viewpoint, and there was an incessant rumbling and cheering from the Arena fans, the fight had its bizarre moments.

Both fighters started jabbering at one another at the outset, and were still muttering at the finish. If there was a master of the psyche job, it wasn't clear who emerged with the highest marks.

When Ali was hit, early, he quickly shook his head in disdainful fashion. No, no, he was alright, his signal indicated. His admirers had nothing to fear. Meanwhile, Frazier continued to rain blows in his direction. That was early. It was significant perhaps that Ali wasn't nodding to anybody in the closing rounds.

But if there was one real surprise, it was the case of the reverse twist. Frazier used Ali's usual ploy, and openly taunted Ali in the fifth round. He laughed in the face of the former champion, dropped his guard, and invited Ali's best punch. He made no effort to win the round even in the eighth, too, there was more fun and games. Frazier engaged in a mock attack, smothering Ali with powder-puff blows.

Those were some of the peaceful acts in an otherwise violent and tremendously interesting evening.

Frazier, the winner, proved to be a marauding mauler and hard to discourage. He threw his punches in bunches. He wasn't about to be denied his right to the title and came out of it as the better man of the two.

Ali, the ex-champion came out of it well, too. He survived the war as a cocksure gamester, his staying power unquestioned, and undisputed.

But there was one basic difference. It was almost four years ago, in April, that Ali was deprived of his title. He refused to be inducted into the U.S. Army for which he was forced into exile.

It was too long a time to catch up on against the likes of Frazier in 15 short rounds.

But it took a super-scrap to prove it.

ON ROPES, Ali fends off punches of Frazier, whose bullying tactics earned him unanimous decision in history's most-ballyhooed fight.

It Was 'THE FIGHT' Just About Everywhere

By United Press International

Behold, the sports fan!

He got up before the sun in Europe and he stood in lines blocks long to get an unrestricted ticket at Radio City. He rampaged in Chicago and he gawked at celebrities in New York. He was a conqueror of space and he once ran for president.

He braved freezing cold to watch or to picket. He paid outrageous scalper's prices and, if he was lucky and lived in Texas' Rio Grande valley, he watched at home for free.

The object of his attention was the heavyweight championship fight between Joe Frazier and Muhammad Ali at Madison Square Garden in New York, which Frazier won in 15 rounds.

A total of 20,435 saw the fight live, but an estimated 300 million more saw it via closed-circuit television around the world. It was televised through the use of 26 earth stations and four satellites to Europe, Asia and South America.

Some who thought they would see it, didn't.

A faulty projector at Chicago Coliseum cancelled the scheduled closed circuit telecast. The manager apologized and told the 7,000 fans to check their newspaper for news on refunds. The crowd did not like it.

"We want it now, we want it now," they chanted. Windows and chairs were broken and the front door of the Coliseum and box office was smashed. Three persons were arrested on disorderly conduct charges before police restored order.

A projector in Duluth, Minn., blew up four minutes before the fight was to begin. The capacity crowd of 2,300 heard the fight but could not see it. They will get their money back.

More than 35,000 fans packed four auditoriums in San Francisco, Oakland and Richmond, Calif., to see the fight, but those turned away stormed the closed gates. Windows were broken at three of the sites and about 18 persons were arrested.

The top price for ringside seats was $150 but there were reports of scalpers selling tickets for $800 or more. More than 600 persons paid $150 each to attend a Democratic fund-raising dinner in New York and watch a closed-circuit telecast.

Sen. Edward M. Kennedy and Sen. John Tunney, the son of former heavyweight champion Gene Tunney, attended. So did former supreme court justice Arthur Goldberg, Ethel Kennedy, the widow of the late Sen. Robert F. Kennedy, and Frank Sinatra, Andy Williams, Robert Goulet and Deborah Kerr.

The Apollo 14 astronauts were at ringside as guests of Mayor John V. Lindsay. Sen. Hubert H. Humphrey, former vice president and democratic presidential candidate, walked almost unnoticed through the Garden crowd, but the fans quickly noticed fried chicken king Col. Harland Sanders.

In addition to those inside, thousands milled around outside the garden, causing massive traffic jams and confusion. Taxis and limousines left passengers off eight blocks from the site.

Frazier Is Champ! Torrid Title Bout Gives the Answer

Times News Services

NEW YORK — Joe Frazier spoke his piece with his fists Monday night and clearly established himself as the undisputed champion of all creation with a unanimous decision over Muhammad Ali in Madison Square Garden.

Frazier nearly punched himself out in the pure fury of 15 rounds but reached down within himself in the last round and found enough energy to knock down Ali, the former champion. Despite a 3½-year layoff, Ali was superbly conditioned and scrambled off his back at the count of three to take the rest of the mandatory eight-count.

The champion hustled to a neutral corner, but sprang across the ring when referee Arthur Mercante signalled the resumption of action. He caught Ali with a swinging left to the head, but Ali managed to hold Frazier in a clinch.

When the referee separated them, Frazier backed Ali up against the ropes again and pummed away at him as he covered up.

All took cruel punishment to the back of the head and kidneys while waiting for the final bell and when it rang the champion waved a hand at Ali in derision and openly laughed at his condition.

Referee Mercante scored eight rounds for Frazier, six for Ali, and had one even. Judge Artie Godson had Frazier ahead, nine rounds to six, and Judge Bill Reith had it 11-4 for Frazier.

Knockout Predictions Went Awry

Although Frazier forced a blistering pace and scored many more punches, Ali was sharper and nearly closed the champion's eyes with the lumps he raised over and under them with straight lefts and frequent right leads.

Ali announced on closed circuit television before the bout began that he was predicting a knockout victory in the sixth round, but he lost that round.

Frazier's forecast of a knockout within 10 rounds, was wrong too.

The triumph was the 27th straight for unbeaten Frazier. It was the first loss for the former champion in 32 bouts. Ali had scored 25 knockouts before this defeat.

Ali's jaw was badly swollen after the bout. Later, it was announced that his jaw was not broken.

Ali was also down in the 11th round, but it was ruled a slip and no knockdown although Frazier had tagged him to the head with a light left before he fell.

It was a big round for the champion. Ali was seen to express contempt for Frazier after getting up, as though to suggest that Frazier was not capable of putting him down. Frazier continued to batter him.

Dr. A. Harry Kleiman came into the ring and gave Ali a cursory examination, but apparently was satisfied that the 29-year-old was going to recover sufficiently to protect himself.

At the start of the 12th round, Frazier broke through with four left hooks and the last one made Ali's knees buckle. He tried to hold but was raked by several more lefts to the head.

Frazier went to the body in the 13th to win the round slightly but Ali got in some good shots.

Ali won the 14th although held frequently and shortly before the bell, he was bludgeoned by three lefts to the head.

Between rounds Angelo Dundee, Ali's trainer, indicated to colleagues in the corner that Ali's jaw was injured.

Both Displayed Emotions Openly

At 215, Ali had a 9½-pound weight advantage. He seemed to tower much more than 3½ inches over the bobbing champion, and used his reach advantage of 6½ inches to taunt Frazier by holding him off with an extended arm.

As expected, it was a bout in which both fighters openly displayed their emotions. Ali danced over to Frazier's corner shortly after entering the ring and teased him by shoving him on the shoulder.

As they received instructions, Ali kept talking down at the champion, but Frazier smiled up at him with jutting jaw as if to convince his opponent he was not going to be "psyched."

In the early rounds, Ali would rise from his stool well before the bell. In the third round, Ali shook his head negatively as though to say, Frazier could not cope with him. Both began talking and the referee warned to stop it and fight.

After losing the first two rounds, Frazier began to take charge and at the end of the fifth he lightly slapped the heel of his glove high on Ali's head in amusement at the former champion's plight and laughter.

The deposed champion's fans began a chant of "Ali, Ali!" in the eighth and when Frazier began clowning again, Ali threw him halfway across the ring. Once more, Ali made a nasty gesture to Frazier at the bell. In the next round, Ali seemed to get a second wind and punished Frazier before being boxed for holding Frazier in a bit of hollow bravado tried to laugh off Ali's punches, but Ali won the round.

Frazier's eyes were beginning to puff by the 10th from Ali's slashing shots and Frazier appeared to be in trouble when he tried to signal a complaint to his own corner about the referee. He said later that the referee had affected his vision with an accidental slap in the eye while separating the boxer. Ali won that round but did not win another until the 14th, which turned out to be a pyrrhic victory because that was when he suffered the injury to his jaw.

One of Modern Era's Better Fights

It was incredible that neither fighter was cut in what was easily the best 15-round heavyweight title fight in the last 35 years.

When Ali failed to make it to the post-fight interview scene, his critics finally savored the observation that somebody was able to shut him up.

However, it wasn't really so. The majority of the fans had come out to see Muhammad Ali get his long-awaited licking. And they got their wish. But they ended up cheering Ali. It was that kind of a fight.

Frazier said he would gladly give Ali a rematch at "any time," but added: "I don't think he'll want one."

Ali did not appear at a joint news conference following the fight, but Drew Boudini Brown, one of his trainers, appeared in his place and said:

"We'll be back, and this time there won't be any three years between fights. You can't put a car in the garage for three years and expect it not to have a few kinks." Boudini said. He was referring to Ali's forced retirement for refusing to accept induction into the United States Army.

"The first thing Muhammad Ali told me in the dressing room after the fight was to 'Get the guns ready, we're going to set traps again.'"

Jaw Badly Swollen but Not Broken

Boudini said Ali was unable to appear at the post-fight conference, attended by some 600 sports writers from around the world, because he had gone to a hospital for treatment of a sore jaw.

But it was learned later than Ali had returned to his hotel room and was snoozing away his wounds and hurt pride.

Angele Dundee, Ali's trainer and adviser, confirmed that Ali's jaw was not broken and that he had taken some medication to ease the discomfort caused by his swollen face.

"Let me go straighten my face up," Frazier said, excusing himself from a post-fight press conference. "I ain't that ugly."

"Who's the champ... who's the champ?" stormed Frazier. "I fought everybody they put up in front of me and I whipped them all," said Frazier. "And that includes Clay (Ali)."

Ali's camp had no quarrel with the decision. "I always called Joe Frazier a turkey," Brown said. "But he's no turkey. He's no ordinary champion."

"He's a real champ. When we come back we're gonna have to take the title away from the champion."

Frazier paid Ali a compliment, acknowledging that the ex-champ had taken some of his hardest shots. "That man takes some punch," said Frazier. "I hit him some shots, and he took the best of them."

Unique Building Method

An addition of 16 new bedrooms, dining room and a solarium to Rose Manor Residence for senior ladies, expected to cost about $160,000, is being built in an unusual manner.

Project architect, D. M. Cowin of the Victoria engineering firm Willis, Cumliffe, Tait and Co. Ltd., says he believes this is the first time that components for such an addition have been built away from the main site.

The addition units were made in a shed at the former Victoria Machinery Depot on Dallas with work at the site and the components both beginning Feb. 1.

"We started installing our building Thursday and by Friday we had the basis for a three-storey building erected," Cowin said.

He explained that the method of construction was made necessary because of the limited space on the Collinson site of Rose Manor. Cowin added that, using this method, his company were able to offer 16 bedrooms for the cost of 12 built under normal methods.

Each bedroom has its own half-bathroom.

Gordon Head Ratepayers To Fight Any Spot Zoning

The newly-formed Gordon Head and District Ratepayers Association is gathering strength and out to get more muscle in its fight with Saanich council against spot zoning.

More than 70 residents turned out Monday night for the association's second meeting and decided to launch a membership campaign at $2 per person.

"The only way we'll get anywhere is to stick together," said Wallace Papter, pro-tem chairman.

Boundaries of the association are Haro Strait, Finnelly-Henderson, McKenzie Avenue and Cedar Hill Road.

Al Mercer, pro-tem vice-chairman, urged a minimum membership of half the residents of the area and said there will be a door-to-door canvass.

FIGHT SPOT ZONING

Formed only a few weeks ago to fight spot zoning and press for a strictly-adhered-to plan for the area, the association also got a number of the mechanics of organization sorted out and the first full elections will be held in just over a month.

Bylaws and objectives were read to the meeting, including furthering the interests of the ratepayers and preserving the amenities of the area.

The association is registered under the Societies Act and has retained Richard Ellis as its legal counsel.

HIGH STANDARDS

Lorne L. Ross, a member of the pro-tem board of directors, said the association wants to ensure a high standard of development.

"We can't go to public hearings on an emotional basis," he said.

"We want Saanich to institute a plan, an official community plan."

He said there are two ways residents can show their concern: Take out membership in the association, and read the newspapers for news about Saanich.

"We are not a negative group," he said. "We are positive for positive development."

"These public hearings are a lot of fun to go to, a heck of a lot more fun than television."

"We have to put an end to helter-skelter, piecemeal rezoning."

Mrs. Shelagh Levey, 2046 Casa Marcia Crescent, asked if the association is concerned about pollution. She said she has a septic tank but soon will have to hook up to a sewer which she said will pollute Finnelly Cove. She said she will refuse to hook up.

Ross said the association must be concerned about "all aspects," but simply hadn't had time to look into this.

The association has opposed three recent rezoning proposals in Saanich. It lost against a day care centre on McCoy Road and a service station at Gordon Head Road and McKenzie but was successful against townhouses on Gordon Head Road. However, a second rezoning application for the townhouses has been made by the developer.

WRONG WAY TRASHMEN LEAD ALL

SHREWSBURY, England (UPI) — The man with the stop watch said Stan Gregory's crew of garbage-men were doing their work all wrong.

Instead of each man fetching a can from a house, emptying it into the truck and carrying it back again, the team ought to start bringing the cans out on the street well before the truck rolls up, said the time-and-motion expert.

But Gregory's crew continued with its old habits and when they arrived back at the depot, they found they were half an hour ahead of the other crews who used the new method.

A town official said all other teams have been ordered to switch to the new collection method but Gregory's crew will be permitted to retain the old system.

P-E Camp Planned At Uvic

University of Victoria's physical education division will operate a month-long day camp for boys and girls between the ages of 10 and 12 this summer.

Bruce Howe, an assistant professor in the education faculty, will be the camp director. He said the emphasis of the camp will be on "individual outdoor activities."

"We have no research interest in the camp and will not be experimenting with the children."

The camp will run from July 5-30, with a $40 fee and a limit of 125 children. About 35 applications have already been received, Howe said.

There will be day trips to Island View Beach, Thetis Lake and Goldstream Park, and the final three days will be spent at a residential camp on Shawnigan Lake.

Uvic education students will be hired as camp leaders.

SHOES SQUEAL ON ROBBER

KALAMAZOO, Mich. (UPI) — Walter Jennings Jr. is serving a three to four-year jail sentence because a pair of shoes squealed on him.

Jennings, 21, was charged with putting on a new pair of shoes at a shopping centre and walking out without paying for them.

The shiny new shoes, Jennings told the judge, "squealed."

Board Dilemma On Involvement

Greater Victoria School trustees spent some time Monday discussing ways of involving the general public in the aims and work of local schools.

Nothing was resolved, but the trustees, meeting as the education committee, were presented with several alternatives on the question of involvement.

A notice of motion from trustee Phillip Ney proposed a student and teacher be appointed to sit on the education committee for one year. The committee serves as an advisory body to the board on matters of education policy.

BROADER BASE

Trustee Walter Donald further suggested appointees to the committee could include not only a senior secondary student but also a student representing the junior high students and a parent representing elementary students.

Donald also said advisory committees consisting of parents, students, teachers and principals could be set up at each school to discuss policy matters and then communicate their feelings to the trustees.

In a six-page report, Bill Stoldal, the board's community information officer, reviewed community involvement ventures in other parts of Canada and the United States, then concluded the best approach would be to establish six advisory groups on an area basis.

Each committee would draw membership from the area served by one of the district's six senior secondary schools, Stoldal said, bringing together parents of all school-age groups.

Stoldal ruled out proposals for a single, area-wide organization and individual school advisory committees as ineffective or unfeasible.

He said students, teachers and principals have been invited to submit their opinions of the scheme.

Driver Warns But Still Wins His Way Home

SANTA FE, N.M. (UPI) — A self-admitted drunk driver claims victory over state police in a private little game, his own version of cat and mouse.

A state police radio dispatcher reported receiving a call from a man who sounded intoxicated. He said the caller advised that there would be a drunk driving a car of a specific description on the Pojoaque Highway between Pojoaque and Santa Fe.

The dispatcher said about 25 minutes later he got another call from the same man, saying: "Well, I got home, and you didn't catch me!"

HIGHWAY OVERPASS AT MCKENZIE URGED

Signatures are being sought for a petition calling on the department of highways to build a pedestrian overpass over Douglas Street at McKenzie Avenue.

Mrs. L. S. Crossley of 703 Haynes said about 10 parents of children attending McKenzie Avenue Elementary are trying to gain support for the overpass idea.

Notes describing the need for the overpass were distributed to pupils Monday, and were to be delivered to their parents.

The petition will be sent to Highways Minister Wesley Black.

Mrs. Crossley said it is not known how many of the 500 McKenzie Avenue children have to cross Douglas to and from school.

The intersection is controlled by a traffic light, but one child was struck by a car there earlier this year, Mrs. Crossley said.

British Women Rise to Occasion

LONDON (AP)—Britain's women's liberation movement reared up into tough action at the weekend. Thousands of women marched through icy blasts of driving snow to demand free abortions and contraceptive devices, free 24-hour nurseries and equal pay.

About 4,000 feminists, many of them with husbands and children in tow, disrupted traffic and police as they chanted and danced their way from Speakers' Corner — traditional stamping ground of Britain's social rebels — to Trafalgar Square.

The demonstration, organized by the London-based Women's Liberation Workshop, probably was the largest gathering of militant females the capitals' ancient streets had borne since Emily Pankhurst's suffragette army set the ball rolling in the early 1900s.

The marchers had little in common with the bra-burners of the American movement. They shunned fiery rhetoric and inflammatory argument in favor of humor.

After presenting a petition to Britain's bachelor Prime Minister Edward Heath at No. 10 Downing Street, the demonstrators converged on Trafalgar Square.

A new edition of the Pas-A-Pas Cookbook will be available at the St. Patrick's Tea planned by the Pas-A-Pas Group of First United Church. The tea will be held Saturday from 2:30 to 4:30 p.m. in the Fellowship Hall, 932 Belmont Road.

There will be a home baking stall. All proceeds are for the church radio fund.

McSorley's Still Mainly for Males

NEW YORK (AP)—The regulars still quaff their ale in mostly male-only splendor at McSorley's and the manager at the Biltmore still answers the phone, "Men's Bar." Not much has changed in the more than six months since women invaded these bastions of masculinity.

Self-Cleaning Floor Step to Liberation

WINNIPEG (CP)—Housewives have self-cleaning ovens — now for self-cleaning floors.

Susan Gadd, consumer information specialist with the Manitoba agriculture department, says the self-cleaning floors are among the latest developments on the market.

that they should be admitted to a state college for women in South Carolina.

Men have been admitted in the past at Winthrop College, at Rock Hill, for summer school or special credits but not as regular candidates for a degree. Now they are not admitted at all.

A special three-judge federal court ruled last Aug. 24 that the rule did not discriminate against men since there are other institutions in the state educational system either all-male or co-educational.

The Supreme Court's brief order merely affirmed the lower court without giving a reason.

Woman Whaler Most Afraid Of Seasickness

MONTREAL (CP)—Betty Osborne, 27, from suburban Dorval, was to leave Monday night for the Maritimes to face one of nature's most arduous challenges—whaling. Her main fear is becoming seasick.

Mrs. Osborne is an artist with the Arctic Biological Station in nearby Ste. Anne de Bellevue.

With technician Michael Kozicki she is on a team headed by Dr. Edward Mitchell.

Employed almost three years, this will be her first field trip.

They will set out from Halifax harbor Wednesday on the Westwhale Eight, a 172-foot whaler chartered in Newfoundland. Then they will spend three weeks chasing and tagging the finback whale, second largest in the world after the blue whale.

Their search will concentrate on the small banks along the 1,000-fathom line on the continental shelf between the Gulf of St. Lawrence and Cape Cod.

No whale less than 50 feet will be tagged, Mrs. Osborne said in an interview, because they are too young. The average finback is about 65 feet in length.

Mrs. Osborne came to Montreal in 1967 from Miami, Man. Her experience at sea has been confined to ferry rides off Cape Cod and in British Columbia's—Georgia Strait between Vancouver Island and the Mainland.

Dr. Mitchell, a veteran at whale marking, warned her early in the project that whaling on the chilly Atlantic in March requires stamina.

"He grilled me hard before he accepted," she said. "He asked if I thought I was strong enough and could withstand the cold. He told me I should be stronger and suggested I do push-ups."

Mrs. Osborne plans to fight her main fear, seasickness, with whisky.

"My going is a test of will. I'm not the outdoors type but I'll become one. I'll work as hard as I have to."

She was an interior designer before joining the Arctic station in 1968. She will do drawings and photography for Dr. Mitchell as well as type his recorded notes. She may also assist in dissections "especially if we get dolphins."

Dr. Mitchell said the aim of the expedition, the sixth since 1966, is to tag as many whales as possible in order to study the movements of their population within the Canadian area.

"We try to find where the whales went—as much as where they are," he said. Whales will in the blubber. Markers that a 12-inch sealed marker, three-quarters of an inch wide with be tagged by firing into them bunk, like any other victim, tripod head. It imbeds itself in the blubber.

If seasickness wins out, Dr. anything.

"If I have to, I'll do do not bit right and protrude are worked out in time by the whale's musculature."

Markers recovered from butchered whales bring $15 each to whoever sends them to Dr. Mitchell, with information about where the whale was harpooned.

Red Chinese Push Family Planning

PEKING — Birth control, feminine hygiene and traditional Chinese herbal medicine are being emphasized here in a drive to improve the health of hundreds of millions of women in China's rural areas.

Late marriage and family planning are being strongly stressed, and China's pharmaceutical industry pushes to produce more birth control materials — including pills. Sterilization operations are done in villages by mobile teams who carry their equipment on bicycles.

For those who do get pregnant, midwives are being trained in new methods of delivery, eliminating unsafe procedures based on ancient beliefs. There is also an important push to educate the often illiterate peasants in basic health and hygiene, particularly for women menstruating, pregnant or giving birth.

Linked with this is a search for new knowledge on women's ailments and new ways to treat them. The Chinese are concentrating on medicines made from cheap, readily available medical herbs rather than the rarer and more expensive western style preparations.

Much of the propaganda, investigation and treatment is being done by female "barefoot doctors" and other women-trained in prevention work and able to treat common, uncomplicated medical problems.

Recent publicity about the health drive coincided with international women's day, Monday. China customarily marks it in the press with stories of exemplary female workers, peasants and soldiers.

Under the Communist Chinese women have been freed from the semi-bondage their sex knew during most of this country's long history. They pay for their liberation with hard work.

Ma Tse-tung noted in 1955, "China's women are a vast reserve of labor power. This reserve should be tapped in the struggle to build a great socialist country."

Tapped it is, particularly for the rice, wheat and cotton fields, the pigpens and the small commune industries of the countryside. Poor levels of female health thus became an important productivity consideration.

That things can stand some improvement is indicated by the survey taken over the course of a year in a county in Kiangsu Province. Of 151,000 women investigated, according to an article in The Peoples Daily, 20 per cent were not able to participate normally in collective labor and 50 per cent had some ailment.

This was a loss of some importance to the collective. Medical treatment and propaganda resources were brought to bear during this past year, and the situation is said to have improved greatly.

Stepped up investigation into female ailments has resulted in new cures. A recent New China News Agency article, for example, told of success by medical workers from Canton's Sun Yat-Sen Medical College in treating prolapse of the uterus with acupuncture and Chinese medical herbs.

Carcinoma of the cervix, uterus and choriocarcinoma have been treated with a combination of herbs and Western medicine.

In the county in Kiangsu Province, much research has gone into developing such combined treatment methods, and even into exclusively herbal prescriptions. The Cha Nan Commune has come up with one which reduced the price for treatment of a particular women's disease from just over 2 cents per person per time to less than one-third of a cent.

One woman from the Cha Nan Commune had suffered from a female ailment for seven years, with bad effects on her work performance and participation in political study. After a visit from a barefoot doctor and treatment with herbs and pills, she was so thoroughly cured that she has since become a "five good" commune member.

Soviet Men Work On Women's Day

MOSCOW (UPI)—Liberated Soviet Women dropped their snow shovels and garbage cans Monday, doffed their hard hats and parked their tractors.

It is International Women's Day in the Soviet Union, the Communist counterpart of St. Valentine's and Mother's Days bound into one 24-hour jubilee of male servility.

It is a time to give a Soviet woman, be she doctor or garbage hauler, a tiny but precious bunch of spring flowers and a firm handshake.

It is a time to congratulate the rotund grandmothers who shovel snow from the streets.

It is a time to reflect that although the Soviet woman is more liberated than her Western sisters in the rubles and kupeks department, the Soviet man still is czar of the house.

Monday was an official holiday for everyone except the men who had to take over women's jobs to maintain skeleton essential services.

Husbands did the cooking

and the dishes. Shops snugly tilted up the new year-like flood of perfume, candy and flower sales.

Alas for the ladies, it's not only back to the job — its back to being housekeeper and mother as well.

Phase one of the Libnik Revolution swept across the Soviet Union 33 years ago with the Bolshevik takeover. It assured women and men equal pay for the same job. Official equality and a devastating toll of male life during World War II gave Soviet women working parity unrivaled in the West.

They outnumber men by almost three to one in the medical and teaching professions. One of every three Soviet engineers is a woman. Many are lawyers. They can build skyscrapers, repair roads, mine coal, shovel cement, pilot Soviet passenger airliners.

But they can't yet ignore the broom and stove when the equalitarian working day is done. Phase two of the Libnik rising, however, is applying some heat.

DEAR ABBY . . .

Interpreting Pants

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: This is in reply to For Democracy, who wanted to know why the women in her office couldn't vote about whether or not to wear pants suits.

Perhaps the boss knows the interpretation some women would put on pants.

Here in New York City, female teachers were recently permitted to wear pants suits. Since that time, every kind of pants imaginable has been worn by women teachers of all ages, shapes and sizes, and some of the rear views have been horrendous! I've seen skin-tight jeans, ill-fitting knit pants, bell bottoms, ski-type stretch pants, lounging pajamas, hip-huggers and a few neat, well-tailored pants suits. (Very few.)

Let the ladies inflict pants on the world outside of business hours. They are, for the most part, hideous. Please omit my name. I am a woman teacher in the Bronx.

Antipants.
DEAR ANTI: "Interpretation" is all important, I agree. One young woman, when arrested for swimming topless at a beach where a sign was posted, "Women must wear two-piece swim suits," explained that hers was a two-piece swim suit. Shorts and a cap to match.

DEAR ABBY: What do you think of mature adults speaking French (or any other foreign language for that matter) in front of people who don't understand a word? My future-in-laws speak French in front of me, knowing I cannot speak a word of it. They speak English very well, and there is no reason for them to speak French.

This has been going on for two years. Please don't tell me to learn French because I had all I could do to pass Spanish in high school.

—Am I making a bid deal out of nothing? Or are they just plain rude?—No Par Lay Voo.
DEAR NO PAR LAY VOO: They are rude for sure. But you could also be making a big deal out of nothing. You don't have to speak French — just pretend to understand.

DEAR ABBY: The story about the 16-year-old girl not being able to attend public school because she was not living with her parents may not have made any sense to you, but it is true.

We had reason to investigate that very situation and learned that a student may not attend a Detroit public school unless he is living with his family or a legal guardian.

It seems to me that if a student finds living conditions at home intolerable, but is able to live with family friends, he should be permitted to attend school as long as he makes his grades and attends school regularly.

We hear so much about "drop outs." I think an investigation would show that many are "locked out."—Michigan Reader.

DEAR READER: I heard the same is true in New Jersey. It still doesn't make any sense to me.

Confidential to "In Love with an Intellectual": The correct quote you are searching for is: "If a man does not keep pace with his companions, perhaps it is because he hears a different drummer. Let him step to the music which he hears, however measured or far away." (Thoreau). The question is whether your intellectual friend is "stepping to the music" of a farout drummer, or making up his own tune as he goes along.

What's your problem? You'll feel better if you get it off your chest. Write to Abby, Box 69700, Los Angeles, Calif. 90069. For a personal reply enclose a stamped, addressed envelope.

ONE-NEEDLE CARDIGAN AND SKIRT . . . tempting to knit

Actress Betsy Palmer 'Will Cook for Anybody'

By CRAIG CLAIBORNE

ENGLEWOOD, N.J. — "Do you entertain theatre people?" a visitor asked Betsy Palmer, the actress, over a cup of hot tea. "I'll cook for anybody," she said and laughed, looking radiant. Betsy Palmer always looks radiant. Just before noon she made a quickly cooked dish, shrimp in ginger and oyster sauce with garlic and parsley.

In the course of the morning three cats ran in and out of the kitchen, a collie named Lady barked at anything that moved, there were two or three friends making small talk and the garage man stopped by to pick up an automobile that had skidded on the ice and suffered a broken axle. And through it all the lady maintained her smiling composure.

"This kitchen," Miss Palmer said, "is very simpatico." It is a large place with eight burners, lots of chopping and storage places and a "pass-through" charcoal grill, which is rarely used. "I can never get the heat close enough to the food," she explained.

The kitchen is part of the warm, rambling and comfortable 12-room mansion that Miss Palmer and her husband have occupied for 13 years. Her husband is Dr. Vincent Merendino, a New York obstetrician and gynecologist. They have one child, Melissa, 9.

Miss Palmer, who has been in such productions as "South Pacific" at the New York City Centre and "Cactus Flower" on Broadway and played roles such as Miss Jean Brodie, is an advocate of low-temperature cooking for meat. She pulled the wax paper from a boneless rolled leg of lamb, vaguely Italian, stuffed with parsley and Parmesan cheese and a few slivers of garlic, and described the Palmer method, culinary division.

"I'll start it in a 300-degree oven for one hour, then reduce the heat to 150 degrees and leave it in the oven about six hours. When it comes out, it will be juicy and pink inside. I never taste. I once cooked a turkey for 28 hours. It was delicious."

Here are two of Miss Palmer's recipes:

MOM'S SHRIMP

- 1 pound raw shrimp
- 2 tablespoons olive oil
- 4 tablespoons butter
- 2 cloves garlic, finely minced
- 1 teaspoon fresh or powdered ginger
- 1/4 teaspoon monosodium glutamate (optional)
- 1/4 cup dry sherry
- 3 tablespoons oyster sauce
- 2 tablespoons finely chopped parsley
- Salt and freshly ground pepper to taste.
1. Shell and devein the shrimp, rinse under cold running water and pat dry.
2. In a heavy skillet heat the oil and butter and add the garlic. Cook, stirring, without browning. Add the shrimp and stir briefly.

3. Add the remaining ingredients and cook until shrimp are pink and white and have lost their translucent look. Do not overcook.

LEG OF LAMB MERENDINO

- 1 leg of lamb, boned and rolled (a six-to-seven-pound leg of lamb before boning)
- 2 or 3 cloves of garlic, sliced.
- 1 small piece of Parmesan cheese left whole (1/4 pound or less; do not grate)
- Parsley sprigs
- Salt and freshly ground pepper to taste
- Oil

1. Preheat the oven to 300 degrees.

2. Make 15 or 20 small incisions with a small sharp knife over the surface of the lamb. Press into each incision a small sliver of garlic.

3. Break or chip off small pieces of the cheese about the size of a pea or a little larger and insert them in the incisions. Do the same with a few stemless parsley leaves. Sprinkle the roast with salt and pepper and rub lightly with oil.

4. Place the meat on a rack in a shallow roasting pan and bake one hour. Reduce the oven heat to 150 degrees and continue baking for six hours or longer, depending on the size of the leg and the desired degree of doneness.

Yields six to eight servings. —The New York Times Food Service

Stripes Make Cardigan Slenderizing

By LOIS HOLMES

Everyone loves a one-needle cardigan because it eliminates practically all the seams. When the cardigan is a charming raglan with slenderizing fagoting stripes and a delicate eyelet pattern, it becomes even more tempting to knit.

The Alpine Peak pattern border is an easy combination of knits, puris and yarn overs that make it simple enough for a beginner. The results are worthy of knitting a matching skirt to wear with your perkiest blouse. Four-ply knitting worsted is sued. Sizes, small, medium and large are all included in each pattern.

To order: Hand Knit No. 671 Alpine Peak Raglan Cardigan, or Hand Knit or Machine Knit No. 555 7-Way Skirt send $1.65 by money order for each pattern directly to Lois Holmes of California, Box 6062, Inglewood, Calif., 9061.

Please print your name, address, and pattern number plainly. Send 30 cents for each pattern for first-class mail and special handling or 30 cents for air-mail.

Dear Readers: A few weeks ago, Ruth Garr of Oklahoma City inquired about the method of picking up a stitch in the row below. Miss Brennan of Chicago, was kind enough to send in the following: Pick up a stitch from the last or row below. Twist this stitch, then place it on the left hand needle and knit as you ordinarily would. This method I find is much easier than the old increase method of knitting in front and back of the stitch. A little practice is all it takes.

Dear Lois: I am an Englishman, and have knitted many sweaters, cardigans, etc. I thought that you and your readers would like to know that men of Scotland were the ones who discovered knitting, on two, four and even six needles, and that the ladies then took it over. —Raymond Hollis

Dear Mr. Hollis: Hurrah for the men! I am glad this is one thing that was turned over to the ladies, but there are still quite a few men who knit and I'd like to hear from more of you, especially if you are in a Veterans' Hospital or any rehabilitation center. I am not a part of the Women's Lib movement, but I think I can speak for a lot of "Knitwits" who will tell you that knitting is one thing that they do not want to be liberated from. By the way, were the six needles used because there were no circular needles then?

Dear Lois: I have found someone who can repair my bungled blocking jobs after I went to all the parties looking like a big, fat, Mama. She gave me a hint I thought you might use. She says many of the ladies in her area do it commonly, using a strip of twill tape (for sewing), write the finished or blocked dimensions of your garment with laundry ink and a fine pen. Then sew it onto one of the garment seams. Then your cleaner knows exactly what measurements you want in your garment without long explanations. Or, if you prefer, put your measurements on the tape and instruct the blocker to give you as much ease as you want. Just be concise. This is good for all knits, not just hand knits. —Elinore

Dear Elinore: Thank you for your helpful suggestion. I am sure that many of my readers will find this very interesting.

Dear Readers: The director of therapeutic recreation in a rehabilitation center in Chicago has made a request for patterns for the rack knitter, a device that knits circular items on pegs. The patients have been knitting scarves and hats. She would appreciate any new patterns that you may have, as well as volunteers to help her learn to use three knitting machines that have been donated to the center. Girls, if you have rack knitter patterns to share and some of you in the Chicago area can teach this lady to use those knitting machines, I'll supply all the knitting machine patterns they need and we'll all be blessed for it. Send your name and address and phone number to me and I'll have her call you.

Pease Pudding Is Better Hot

By HILDA BEASTALL

"Pease Pudding hot, Pease Pudding cold."

Pease Pudding in the pot, nine days old."

This silly little ditty came into my mind when a reader asked me whether I knew how to make an old-fashioned Pease Pudding.

After some digging around in several old books, I found a recipe dated 1845. It seems that dried peas (spelled pease) were used long before the more tender varieties were grown for fresh green peas, and it was the dried product which was always used to make Pease Pudding.

Here is the recipe, brought up to date just enough to be useful today.

To be served with boiled pork, or a piece of boiled bacon.

- 1 cup split dry peas
- 2 tablespoons butter
- Salt and pepper

Tie the peas in a thick tightly woven cloth, giving them space to swell so they won't be hard, but not too much or they will be watery. A piece of stout cotton sheeting, or a still-good linen dish towel will do the trick.

Put the pudding, in the shape of a ball into a saucepan with cold water to cover, bring to boiling point and boil for about 40 minutes.

Lift the tied-up bag into a colander or strainer to allow water to drain; untie the cloth and mash the peas to a paste in the cloth with a wooden spoon.

Stir in the butter, salt and pepper to taste and tie up, very tightly this time, and boil in the same water for half an hour.

Turn out gently into a dish without breaking the shape and serve very hot.

To make a richer pudding add three beaten eggs and an extra tablespoon of butter. Whisk the eggs well before mixing into the mashed peas. Boil in the cloth for one hour.

A more modern recipe for Pease Pudding:

Take 1 cup of split peas. Cover with cold water and boil until tender (about 40 minutes). Drain and rub through a sieve or strainer.

Add one beaten egg, 2 tablespoons soft butter, salt and pepper to taste. Turn into a tightly woven cloth dusted with flour, leaving space for the peas to swell a little. Boil in the strained water for 1/2 hour, adding more hot water if needed.

Turn out whole on a heated plate; sprinkle with chopped chives and parsley if you have them fresh. Serve with whole boiled small onions, and boiled pork or bacon. Baked apples make a nice extra.

Serve Pease Pudding with Broccoli Souffle, a light delicate dish featured in this column last month as "a meatless Lenten supper."

There is plenty of protein value in the dried peas, and vitamins galore in both peas and broccoli.

HOME GARDEN

Spring Blooms Sprung

By HILDA BEASTALL

Blooming before February fades away, is the first of dozens of ornamental trees suitable for average gardens in or near the city. Already in flower, indeed it bore a scattering of little white blossoms in fall, too, is Prunus subhirtella, the variety autumnalis giving both fall and spring color.

Hilda

In spring it blooms on leafless twigs. A great number of the so-called Japanese cherries come under the name of Prunus serrulata. Some have the Japanese varietal names: Hakura is of rather erect habit, with coppery young foliage and clusters of double rosy red flowers in April; a narrow perpendicular habit is shown in Amanogawa, which can be grown to have twiggy flowering spurs from the ground to the tip. Semi-double and pink, the blossoms are a great asset to the spring garden.

Prunus hilreana is a very double rose flowered, purple-leaved spring tree, related to the Prunus pissardii of older plantings on Victoria city streets.

As a point of interest with this strange-sounding name, pronounced "bleery-ana," W. J. Bean of Kew tells us in his Trees and Shrubs it originated as a chance seedling in 1895 near the town of Biere, France.

Of less stature, though occasionally seen at five or six feet in sheltered gardens, is Prunus triloba plena, the double-flowering plum (or almond), with lovely little rose pink blossoms tightly clustered along its bare stems in March and early April.

In exposed gardens this treasure is quite hardy, but needs severe pruning right after flowering each spring. I give it a handful of lime, too, and a mulch of compost to start new shoots coming along.

Less commonly seen, though even more beautiful and longer lasting in bloom are the ornamental crabs.

Malus eleyi and Malus aidenhamensis are two, distinctive for their purplish red leaves and claret red flowers. The fruits are useful for jellies and conserves.

Of larger growth is Malus floribunda, often spreading to 35 feet which is more than its usual height. But the flowers coming with the new green of the leaves create a truly exquisite picture. Crimson buds, rosy pink in bloom, paling with age make this a tree to consider if you want, or have space for, only one in a section of your garden.

It will give you shade as well as beauty. The smaller Malus sargentii will fit in practically anywhere. It is dainty, going up to six feet, with small white blossoms in May, just the right size to centre a tiny garden of herbs.

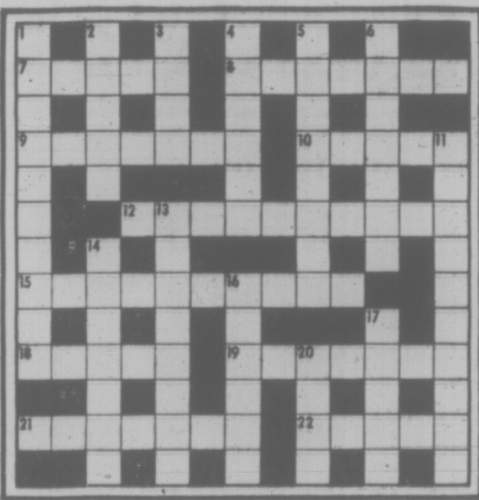

VILLAGERS WIN PROTEST

MARDEN, England (UPI) — The villagers of Marden fought to keep their policeman and won. When the villagers heard earlier this week Constable Bill Otten was being transferred because he had failed to make enough arrests, dozens wrote protest letters to his superiors.

Today, the police officials said it had all been a misunderstanding and said Otten could stay in Marden until his retirement next year.

HOT PANTS 'CHILLY' SAYS 192-POUNDER

ENDERBY, England (UPI) — Delia Frisby wore a pair of hot pants to work on a dare.

Nothing unusual about that except Mrs. Frisby, 38-year-old mother of two, weighs 192 pounds. When she appeared in the outfit at the radiator factory where she works, production stopped as workmen gathered to gawk at her 42-36-44 figure.

But Mrs. Frisby was not too impressed. "Frankly, I found them a bit chilly," she said.

Maternity Leave Likely Addition To Labor Code

By IAN PORTER

OTTAWA (CP) — Labor Minister Bryce Mackasey plans to introduce amendments this week to the Canada Labor (Standards) Code which, among other things, will provide new safeguards for the rights of women workers.

The minister added lightly in an interview that he may defer presentation of the bill so as not to upstage the New Democratic Party which has scheduled a "ladies' day" debate today in the Commons on women's rights.

Mr. Mackasey declined to give details of the new legislation but did grant that "an obvious guess" is that it will contain a requirement that women on maternity leave have the right to return to their same job.

Sources close to the minister said the amendments will incorporate some of the principal recommendations of the report of the royal commission on the status of women, tabled Dec. 7.

Also expected is a cost-of-living escalator clause for the federal minimum wage level, a change forecast by the minister last spring when the level was raised 40 cents to $1.65 an hour.

The amendments may also impose improved notice and severance pay provisions for laid-off workers.

Mr. Mackasey said another move will seek to make more realistic the hours-of-work clause in the present code, which has been criticized as too idealistic.

While amendments to the code affect only those workers in the federal labor jurisdiction—including employees of railways, interprovincial communications and trucking operations, banks and certain other financial institutions—they are frequently the pattern for amendments to provincial laws.

The rights of working women have been a subject for several studies by the labor department.

A key figure in drafting the new legislation has been Sylvia Gelber, women's bureau director in the department who was praised by the minister in a meeting last week with the Canadian Labor Congress.

Main aspects of the issue are expected to get an airing today in the debate called by the New Democrats to "test the intentions" of the government on behalf of women.

The New Democrat motion will call on the government "to give special and urgent attention" to recommendations for the inclusion of housewives in the Canada and Quebec pension plans, for a national day-care act and other measures.

Other important labor legislation is promised for tabling within the next week. Mr. Mackasey said he now is giving a final going-over to legislation revising the Unemployment Insurance Act and may also soon table a long-awaited revision of the Industrial Relations Disputes Investigation Act.

Gorton Teeters In Party Crisis

CANBERRA (Reuter)—Malcolm Fraser, who resigned as Australian defence minister, told Parliament today that Prime Minister John Gorton is not fit to lead the country.

Fraser, who quit Monday in a bitter personal feud with the Australian leader, put Gorton squarely on the spot and left him fighting for his political future.

"He is not fit to hold the great office of prime minister," Fraser said.

GORTON challenge likely ejected from the parliamentary press gallery today for shouting at Gorton: "You liar!"

Ramsey's report in the newspaper, The Australian, about relations between Fraser and the army led to the minister's resignation.

The correspondent has claimed he showed the story to Gorton before publication without the prime minister taking any action to stop him—a situation which Fraser described as "intolerable."

His outburst came when Gorton gave his version of this claim in Parliament while commenting on the Fraser resignation.

OPPOSITION PLANS MOVE

The opposition Labor party now plans to present a no-confidence motion Wednesday and, if only three members of the ruling Liberal-Country party coalition defect in the delicately-balanced House of Representatives, the government could be defeated.

Fraser added more fuel to the fire today, accusing the 58-year-old Gorton of obstinacy, impetuosity and emotional reactions and with having imposed strains on the government.

"I cannot serve in his government," Fraser said, adding that Gorton was guilty of "an unreasoned drive to get his own way."

Earlier, Gorton faced a meeting of parliamentary members of his Liberal party and was sharply rebuffed.

Three members were said to have told Gorton they could give no guarantee they would not vote for an opposition motion against him. Two others said they thought he should step down.

Political observers do not predict an imminent general election if Gorton is defeated—only his replacement by another Liberal as head of government.

Janitors' Contract Accepted

A contract between Greater Victoria school board and janitors, tradesmen and groundskeepers has been accepted by both sides.

The board's finance and legal committee, which includes all nine trustees, recommended acceptance of the new two-year pact at a meeting Monday.

The workmen had voted to accept by a 66 per cent majority Sunday. They will get an eight per cent pay increase this year and 7½ per cent in 1972.

The janitors, represented by the Canadian Union of Public Employees, have agreed to a Tuesday to Saturday week, paving the way for schools to be open six days a week.

The board will pay janitors eight hours' wages for seven hours work. Janitresses will be paid at the same rates as janitors when they perform the same kinds of work.

Rose Told Policemen Where Masks Hidden

MONTREAL (CP)—The Crown closed its case today in the trial of Paul Rose, accused of kidnapping and murdering Pierre Laporte, Quebec's former labor minister, last October.

The move followed testimony from a Quebec Provincial Policeman who said that on instruction from Rose, rifle stocks and disguises were found in nearby St. Hubert.

Sgt. Marcel Ste. Marie said stocks for M-1 rifles, three plastic face masks, a pair of sunglasses and two woolen hats were found hidden at the Armstrong St. house identified as the place where Laporte was held.

The material found by police on two separate trips—both made at Rose's suggestion—according to testimony—was hidden by a trap door in the ceiling of a closet.

Sgt. Ste. Marie said Rose

told him on Dec. 29 to look for the trap door and on Jan. 7 asked whether a bag containing the disguises had been found.

Police missed the bag in the first check but found it in a second trip.

TOLD LOCATION

Sgt. Ste. Marie said Rose volunteered the information as he was being taken back to his cell from court.

In testimony Monday, the sergeant and a constable read a statement attributed to Rose which said he, his brother Jacques and Francis Simard "executed" Mr. Laporte.

Sgt. Ste. Marie and Constable Jean-Claude Boisland, reading the statement to the 12-man jury, said it was made in their presence Dec. 29. It was not signed by Rose.

The Roses and Simard were arrested that day in a tunnel under a farmhouse near St.

Trudeaus Return To Fans, Storm

Times Ottawa Bureau

OTTAWA — The best and the worst of Ottawa greeted Prime Minister Pierre Elliott Trudeau and his 22-year-old bride of four days Monday night.

The best was a crowd of between 400 and 500 hardy souls who turned out to cheer the new chateau of 24 Sussex Drive and to shout heartily at the prime minister: "Good for you, Pierre!"

The worst was the 10-degree weather, the swirling snowstorm and the near-gale winds that rocked the Department of Transport Jetstar as it set down at Uplands Airport and whipped round the faces of the newlyweds as they alighted from the aircraft.

MISERABLE

It was one of the most miserable Ottawa nights in memory — weatherwise — but for the excited crowd out to meet the new Mrs. Trudeau it was a fairy tale come true.

The bride, the former Margaret Sinclair of North Vancouver, stepped into the hell of Ottawa's winter wearing a red tapestry midi skirt with matching coat, a white fur hat, and red leather boots.

And a smile that stretched from ear to ear and was as warm as an August morning.

She and the prime minister, looking surprisingly boyish and trying to stay in the background, were greeted at planeside by Public Works Minister and Mrs. Arthur Laing of Vancouver South.

(Laing was acting prime minister in Trudeau's absence. The normal acting prime minister, External Affairs Minister Mitchell Sharp, is away on a 16-day official visit to five African nations.)

Also on hand on the ice-and-snow-covered tarmac — Ottawa has had an all-time record 155 inches of snow so far this winter — was Toronto MP Barney Danson, the prime minister's parliamentary secretary.

Unions Say Strike, Workers Say 'No'

LONDON (AP)—British workers, worried by a wobbling economy, staged their second revolt in a dozen hours today against union pressure to go on strike.

By an estimated three to one, 5,600 workers at Rolls-Royce's Glasgow plant rejected strike action urged by shop stewards as a protest against the layoff of 1,655 employees.

By 490 to 30, workers at the Accels Green battery factory in Birmingham Monday night turned down a call for a

March 18 strike to protest the government's Industrial Relations Bill.

"Some of us are tired of being pushed around by a bunch of flaming Commies," one shop steward said.

The original March 18 strike call came from the Amalgamated Union of Engineering Workers.

Four out of five of the Accels workers are members of the Transport and General Workers Union, which supports the strike.

The rank-and-file revolt in British labor came at a troubled and confused time in British industry when unemployment totals 600,000.

The revolts strengthened the hand of Prime Minister Edward Heath. His Conservative government proposes to halt a wave of unofficial strikes with the Industrial Relations Bill that would put unions under broad rules carrying fines for violations.

And, the government has thrown its weight against any wage settlements above 10 per cent.

Rolls-Royce, aero-engine and motor car giant now in receivership, announced that 4,300 workers would be laid off in the next three weeks.

Most are executives, managers, technicians and designers.

"Two of us held him while the other tightened the cuffs he wore around his neck," Rose later refused to sign the statement "for political reasons" but answered "yes" when asked whether it contained the truth.

The statement was accepted in evidence by Mr. Justice Marcel Nichols, who said after examining 14 police witnesses that it was made "freely and voluntarily."

"All policemen who had any contact with Rose between the time of his arrest and the time of the statement were called as witnesses and testified that no threats or promises had been made to the accused."

China Gives U.S. Serious Warning On 'Aggression'

Times News Services

PEKING — Premier Chou En-lai returned here Monday night after a previously unannounced visit to Hanoi where he issued the most serious warning to date concerning the "serious threat" the United States is "posing" to China.

Few details of his visit were available here — the first information came from a Hanoi radio broadcast — but observers generally echoed the diplomat who remarked: Chou En-lai doesn't go anywhere for nothing.

The Friday-to-Monday visit was notable for the high-level military officials accompanying Chou, armed forces deputy chief of staff Chou Hsi-tso and Yeh Chien-ying, vice-chairman of the Communist party's military affairs commission.

According to Hanoi radio, Chou declared that his country had made "adequate preparations" to meet the American threat out he did not elaborate.

'CLOSE NEIGHBORS'

The three Indochina countries are China's close neighbors. By willfully enlarging their aggressive war in the Indochina area, "the U.S. imperialists are posing a serious threat to China. The Chinese government and the Chinese people have already seen through all the frenzied and adventurous nature of the U.S. imperialists and have made adequate preparations," Chou said.

The Nixon government must be responsible for all the serious consequences arising from its unending expansion of the aggressive war in the Indochina region.

These words, were offset to some degree at least by following statements that "at present the international situation is very good" and that the Nixon administration is "facing difficulties both at home and abroad and becoming very weak." Chou said this was "clear enough" from President Nixon's recent State of the World message.

'MORALE MISSION'

In Washington today, officials were quoted as saying that the Chinese threats as a whole have not yet approached the level of warning issued prior to Peking's intervention in the Korean War. One official said the Chou visit was essentially a "morale mission."

Reinforcing the importance of Chou's journey to Hanoi is the fact that he has made only two other trips outside China since mid-1966. In September, 1968, he made a brief appearance in Hanoi to pay his respects at the bier of Ho Chi Minh.

'Worst Over' For Tug, Freighter

VANCOUVER (CP)—The crippled Dutch freighter Antillian Star was being hauled through the Queen Charlotte Strait today on the last leg of its voyage to Vancouver.

For the first time in three days the vessel and its crew of 31 were out of gale-force winds and the heaving seas of the North Pacific.

Signals China Is Shifting

(An analysis by the long-time Far East correspondent of the Washington Post.)

By STANLEY KARNOW.

Despite President Nixon's efforts to assure the Chinese that he has no intention of threatening them, "the risks of their involvement in the escalating Indochina war seem to have increased significantly."

One important signal that Peking may be considering the idea of intervention is apparent in the fact that, for the first time since the conflict began, Hanoi spokesmen have been brandishing that spectre in their propaganda.

To dismiss this as simply "psychological warfare," as the White House has done, overlooks two vital changes in Chinese and North Vietnamese attitudes.

For one thing, Hanoi has been authorized by Peking to raise the score of Chinese intervention. This suggests that the Chinese have shifted drastically away from their past position of caution.

At the same time, talk by the North Vietnamese of Peking's possible participation in the war means that they are no longer as reluctant as they formerly were to have the Chinese weigh into the Indochina equation.

That they are turning more openly towards the Chinese for support also underlines evidence that Hanoi and Peking have drawn closer together since last year, when the U.S. invasion of Cambodia served to weaken the Soviet Union's countervailing influence in North Vietnam.

FEAR INVASION

Though they traditionally distrust the Chinese, the North Vietnamese have clearly been prompted to increase their dependence on them by the fear that the Saigon forces, backed by the United States, will cross the 17th parallel just as went into Cambodia and Laos.

This fear has been fueled by repeated South Vietnamese appeals for thrusts into the North. Even though he is

Laird Says Red Weapons Advancing

WASHINGTON (Reuter)—Defence Secretary Melvin Laird reported today further Soviet and Chinese progress in strategic weapons, but asked Congress for only a limited expansion of the Safeguard anti-ballistic missile system.

He said the nature of the Russian and Chinese nuclear threats was serious enough to call for full deployment of Safeguard, to embrace 12 widely separated sites if eventually authorized.

But he told the House of Representatives armed services committee that President Nixon had decided to exercise restraint in the hope that the strategic arms limitation talks with the Soviet Union will produce agreements to scale down the arms race.

Laird said in his annual defence strategy statement to Congress that China might have tested an intercontinental ballistic missile over a reduced range last year.

Defence officials said there were indications, although not conclusive evidence, that the test took place over several thousand miles.

'VICTORY FOR B.C. PEOPLE'

'Road-Running' Halted

By PETER McNELLY

The provincial government moved Monday to protect and control development of lands adjacent to new highways.

And the New Democratic Party hailed the move as a "genuine victory for the people of British Columbia" which followed their attack on land speculation earlier in the legislative session.

Highways Minister Wesley Black introduced in the legislature an amendment to the Department of Highways Act which gives the government the power to expropriate any land adjacent to new, proposed or regulated highways.

The amendment does not apply to existing highways. The government has been under heavy fire this session from New Democrat (MLAs led by Robert Williams (NDP, Vancouver East) for failing to halt land speculation, nicknamed "roadrunning."

Williams has charged that Premier Bennett's sons are among "a growing class of rip-off artists and millionaires on the make" who have profited from development of lands adjacent to B.C. highways.

In an interview outside the legislature, Black denied that the government brought in the amendment because of Williams' attacks.

"We have been considering an amendment to this act for some time," Black said, "but it's been very difficult to come up with the correct wording and a great many other facets."

Black praised the bill for being " gutsy and simple. The government has the authority to sell, lease, dispose of by tender or auction any land it may expropriate under the Department of Highways Act."

Nothing in the act or the amendment requires the government to expropriate lands adjacent to public highways.

Present wording of the act allows expropriation only for the purposes of acquiring lands for public works or establishment of wildlife reserves. The amendment enlarges this power to include "the purpose of protecting and controlling the use of any land adjacent to the right-of-way of any proposed, new, or newly relocated highway."

Williams left no doubt Monday he considers the bill a response to his earlier charges against the premier's sons.

He said the government "is obviously embarrassed by the disclosures."

PROMISE EARLIER

Williams promised in 1968 "as highways minister after Phil Gaglardi resigned, also under fire for land deals involving his sons—that "road-running" would stop.

"I said at the time it was a victory for the people," Williams said. "Now that this has been placed in statute form, we consider it to be a genuine victory for the people of British Columbia."

Williams warned that the amendment could just be a "smokescreen unless the government pursues an aggressive program of land acquisition. This is the only way to erase the "landgrab" of the government as far as land speculation near highways is concerned," he said.

Alex Macdonald (NDP, Vancouver East) who first used the phrase "road-running" back in 1968, said Friday the bill gives the

Fisherman Limps Back From Death

A View Royal sports fisherman rests in bed today, thankful to escape death from drowning and survive a hazardous two-mile crawl up steep cliffs to safety.

Bruce Allen, 43, of 109 Burnett, had been presumed drowned after a two-day search which began Sunday morning when his 15-foot runabout was found abandoned south of McCurdy Point in Saanich Inlet, south of the cement plant near Bamberton.

He arrived home Monday at 4 p.m., his knees raw from crawling and his legs an agony of aches.

The Times on Monday had reported that Allen was presumed drowned when his boat was found at 11 a.m. Sunday without a trace of him.

His ordeal began about 7 a.m. Sunday when, replacing some sparkplugs in his 60-horsepower outboard, he straightened up to ease a kink in his back.

A fishing line, he had dangled from the stern caught in his jacket hauling him over the side.

"I guess the line must have snagged on the bottom. I guess I kicked the boat away as I went in. When I came up the boat was out of reach. There was no way I could reach her. The only thing I could do was head for shore."

Allen figures he swam about 50 yards, fully-clothed, weighed down by leather boots, heavy jacket and pants.

"It's pretty hard to tell how far it was. I just kept thrashing my legs about. The last 10 feet were the worst—I could barely keep afloat. By the time my feet touched bottom only my nose was above water."

Allen rested, hoping some boat would spot him. None did.

Ahead of him lay the only choice left—a steep cliff, gorged with unpassable gullies.

He started to climb. By 9 a.m. he was stalled.

"I guess it was all the thrashing around I did in the water. My legs were knotted up in Charley-horses. From then on it was work up another 50 feet, stop an hour, work on my legs and get going again."

He kept hoping for rescue. "I couldn't hear any one hollering but I kept shouting

Allen, who said he soon began to sweat as he climbed, had no food and no way in which to start a fire.

"I put my wet matches inside my jacket so my body could dry them out. But all I

Finally, he made the highway and collapsed.

"I was just the other side of Shawnigan Lake Road. I tried to hitch-hike but couldn't move far. I gave that up. I didn't want to be killed by a car after making it that far."

As he neared Shawnigan Lake Road he hailed a grader pulled over to the side. He explained who he was and at 3 p.m. he was riding slowly along the highway.

"I was so hungry by that time I could have eaten anything. The driver offered me a cigarette. I don't smoke but that one tasted good. It took my mind off my hunger."

A gnawing fear, even then, gripped him.

"I had left my wallet home and I had no money to phone my family. I wondered how they were—that was my biggest worry."

Near the Goldstream Inn the grader dropped him off and he made the final leg to his home in a truck driven by a friendly driver, who helped him make the final steps to the door.

An experienced outdoors-

Experienced woodsmen who have attempted to climb the cliffs to the highway describe the terrain as "treacherous and damned difficult and exhausting, even by a person who has not gone through the ordeal of almost drowning."

"It was great. The house was full of people. I was so hungry I ate five ham sandwiches, two cheese ones, three oranges, and drank cups and cups of tea."

Will he go fishing again?

"Of course. My brother-in-law will be here next weekend and the four of us will be going out."

But, says Allen, he's not going to make the same mistake twice.

"From now on when I'm working in the stern of the boat I'm going to make sure I have a line on me—and a lifejacket."

He also says he's going to be more careful when it comes to motors.

"I knew my sparkplugs on the big motor were bad. I should have changed them Saturday night but we did something else instead."

"I should have known better—it was just plain stupid."

When morning came he again began inching up the cliff face, 25 feet at a time, on his knees, with longer and longer periods in between.

He drank melted snow, "which just made my dry out more and more." He felt as if he was starving.

Subdividers Should Pay Says Upward

The high cost of bringing water to new subdivisions in outlying areas should be paid for by the subdividers or eliminated by control over new development, the Greater Victoria Water Board was told today.

The board decided to seek a solution through the B.C. Public Utilities Commission which must approve any changes in the cost of water.

Greater Victoria water commissioner Ron Upward told board members today the lack of land remaining for subdivision near the central urban areas has stepped up subdivision building in the Metchosin, Happy Valley, Rocky Point-Pedder Bay area.

Subdividers pay for services in the subdivision, he said, but the water district must pay the high cost of bringing water out to the subdivisions.

SAANICH WARNING Sewer Hookup Can Be Forced

Legal machinery is available to enforce a Saanich bylaw which allows two years' grace for residents to connect with sewers, municipal engineer Neville Life said today.

He was commenting on remarks by a resident Monday night at the Gordon Head and District Ratepayers' Association who said she has a properly functioning septic tank, does not want to pollute Finnerty Cove where the outfall is, and will refuse to hook up to the sewer. (See earlier story on page 19.)

Life said the municipal bylaw allows residents two years from the time the sewer line is built along the street to hookup, unless the medical health officer orders an immediate hookup because of pollution problems.

He said a refusal to hook up six or eight years ago led to the municipality letting a contract for the installation and the cost was added to the property's tax bill.

COUNTS TELL

Life also said the Finnerty Cove outfall operates "well within" the Pollution Control Board standards as set out for the new Macaulay Point outfall in Esquimalt.

This has been shown by counts taken by the health department, he said.

The outfall at Finnerty Cove extends 1,300 feet out to sea discharging sewage at a depth of 44 feet from a 24-inch concrete pipe. It was built in 1961. Sewage is comminuted (chopped up) and chlorinated.

The 1966 sanitary sewerage study of the Greater Victoria area said there is "no problem" at Finnerty Cove, in contrast with other major outfalls.

Saanich Mayor Hugh Curtis said the sewer installations are being made within an area adjacent to the currently-sewered land in a five-year program which got 80 per cent approval in a referendum in 1968.

He said some septic tanks are troublesome and effluent finds its way into ditches and eventually into storm drains which flow into the sea.

PENSIONERS TO DEMONSTRATE

Old age pensioners from Victoria are expected to join a group of about 1,000 who will travel by bus from Vancouver Wednesday to demonstrate at the legislature.

The demonstration, planned by the Old Age Pensioners Association of B.C. is intended to publicize the financial difficulties of senior citizens.

Grace Sherwood, president of the Victoria Old Age Pensioners Association, said all 400 members are being urged to attend.

The gathering on the legislature grounds will start at 1:30.

CURTIS BOOSTS GOOD EMPLOYEE RELATIONS City Labor Too 'Costly' for Saanich

Joint labor negotiations between Saanich and Victoria would result in Saanich picking up "costly" aspects of Victoria's contracts, Hugh Curtis said today.

The Saanich mayor was replying to comments by Victoria Mayor Courtney Haddock after Saanich rejected an attempt by the city to form a single bargaining unit for Greater Victoria municipalities.

Curtis also said joint bargaining could harm a "good working relationship" that his council has with its employees.

'NOT TAKEN LIGHTLY'

To bring in "highly skilled, knowledgeable, professional negotiators is to lose something in relationships between management and employee," Curtis said.

Asked if he was suggesting that Victoria's management-employee relations were less desirable, Curtis said "I will leave you to draw your own conclusions."

Curtis said his council's decision not to join bargaining forces was "not taken lightly," and "as I recall, this view was pretty well unanimous."

Oak Bay's council Monday night directed Mayor Frances Elford to push for joint negotiations at the Inter-municipal Committee level.

Curtis said there are "certain long-standing aspects of the city's (labor) agreement which we believe are costly. The most costly of these, he said, is the ability of employees to convert unused sick leave into cash at retirement time.

This "will and has cost many thousands of dollars," he said. "Saanich does not have it, and we certainly don't want it."

Haddock had warned that separate negotiations results in "leap-frogging" by the unions — using contract gains in one municipality as ammunition for similar gains in another.

'NO DOUBT'

Curtis said "I appreciate the city's point of view — I don't agree with it." The only way to avoid leap-frogging is through a single contract for the whole of the province, he said.

Curtis said there was "no doubt" that the unions were concentrating on Saanich this year, and Saanich had devalued the "extremely important principle" of "no parity with up-island units," whose labor settlements are based on levels of pay reached by the International Woodworkers of America.

"We found this to be completely unacceptable," Curtis said.

Curtis also said the union "recognized that we were prepared to go all the way" in negotiations this year, "and by all the way I mean strike, and that's the way I think it should be."

He said he believes in the "closest possible co-operation between all areas" of government, meaning school boards, municipalities and the Union of B.C. Municipalities.

Arthur Mayse ...

ON A GREY DAY LATE

In January, a little company trudged along a road and through a gate to pause by a memorial slab, not often visited. A Buddhist priest gave a brief discourse, then offered up a prayer. One of the group placed a tribute of chrysanthemums on the stone. The gesture marked the end of a search and a pilgrimage.

The story back of both is a quiet one. You may find it sad. Death, after all, is especially poignant when it takes the young, and Midshipman Haruma Kusano was scarce more than a boy when he died far from his island home.

Interpreted from the Japanese, his name signifies "Spring Horse." It is a lucky, thrusting name. But his luck and his spring ended in 1892, and the ship that brought him to our shores sailed without him.

An admiral who never forgot the friend of his youth has a place in the story. So does Rev. Takimichi Takahatake of Steveston Buddhist Church, who is preparing a parish history.

Takahatake was leaving through old church records one day when he came on an entry that set him musing.

It dealt with a request made by a senior officer of the Japanese Imperial Navy when his flagship called at Vancouver some years before the Second World War. Admiral Momotake asked that a memorial service be held for a friend of long ago. They had been midshipmen together. The cruiser in which they served had visited Victoria late in the last century, and his friend had died here.

It was also recorded that a graveside service was held, the admiral attending.

But what cemetery?

As a matter of church history, and also because he was moved by the account, Takahatake felt that he should find out.

He wrote to a Japanese exchange student, one of seven attending University of Victoria. She passed the question on to Canadian Armed Forces base — Royal Navy country when the two midshipmen came this way — and got the answer.

She would find the name she sought on a stone in the old Esquimalt naval cemetery off Colville Road.

With a Japanese-born instructor, some of the exchange students drove out to that quiet retreat by Gorge Vale golf course. At the top of a gentle slope, where the older markers stand in green turf, they found a carved granite stone that carried Kusano's name.

They felt that something more was owing to the memory of a young fellow countryman. A few weeks later, they returned, bringing chrysanthemums. The priest from the Steveston church came with them.

He would hold a simple service. Not all of them were of the Buddhist faith, and he would understand if these did not wish to take part. But all remained until the prayer had been spoken, and the flowers laid on the chiseled granite.

The chrysanthemums were gone when my wife and I paused there a couple of Sundays ago. But 79 years of weathering have failed to blur the inscription.

"In memory of Midshipman H. Kusano," it reads. "Died at Esquimalt, Nov.

11, 1892, aged 22 years. Erected by the captain, officers and the comrades of HJMS Kongo."

A smaller marble tablet lettered in Japanese characters is set at one end of the slab, close to the trunk of a tall evergreen. Carved into the other end are an anchor and a cherry blossom — insignia of Japan's navy.

The cherry blossom is also the symbol of the samurai, the high-born warrior caste from which that still-young navy recruited its officers.

It does not linger to wither on the bough. It blooms and falls.

So with Haruma Kusano, whose friend sailed on to take his part in great naval engagements and to win an admiral's rank. The midshipman lies here, in good company.

British Women Rise to Occasion

LONDON (AP)—Britain's women's liberation movement reared up into tough action at the weekend. Thousands of women marched through icy blasts of driving snow to demand free abortions and contraceptive devices, free 24-hour nurseries and equal pay.

About 4,000 feminists, many of them with husbands and children in tow, disrupted traffic and police as they chanted and danced their way from Speakers' Corner—traditional stamping ground of Britain's social rebels—to Trafalgar square.

The demonstration, organized by the London-based Women's Liberation Workshop—probably was the largest gathering of militant females the capital's ancient streets had home since Emily Pankhurst's suffragette army set the ball rolling in the early 1900s.

The marchers had little in common with the bra-burners of the American movement. They shunned fiery rhetoric and inflammatory argument in favor of humor.

After presenting a petition to Britain's bachelor Prime Minister Edward Heath at No. 10 Downing Street, the demonstrators converged on Trafalgar Square.

But Americans Shut Men Out

WASHINGTON (UPI)—The U.S. Supreme Court Monday rejected arguments by a group of male students that they should be admitted to a state college for women in South Carolina.

Men have been admitted in the past at Winthrop College, at Rock Hill, for summer school or special credits but not as regular candidates for a degree. Now they are not admitted at all.

A special three-judge federal court ruled last Aug. 24 that the rule did not discriminate against men since there are other institutions in the state educational system either all-male or co-educational.

The Supreme Court's brief order merely affirmed the lower court without giving a reason.

McSorley's Still Mainly for Males

NEW YORK (AP)—The regulars still quaff their ale in mostly male-only splendor at McSorley's and the manager at the Biltmore still answers the phone, "Men's Bar."

Not much has changed in the more than six months since women invaded these bastions of masculinity.

It was June 25 when Judge

Walter R. Mansfield ordered the 116-year-old McSorley's Ale House to let women saunter across its sawdust-covered floor to the bar.

Today, said Daniel Kirwan, manager of the bar, "nobody could care less about the women"—the few who do appear.

The bar was "a big curiosity for the first couple of weeks," but then interest tapered off, Kirwan said. He estimated there has been no more than a couple of hundred women customers all told since the sex barrier was broken.

The story was the same at the Biltmore, which served its first female customer Aug. 26 during a nation-wide women's strike for equality.

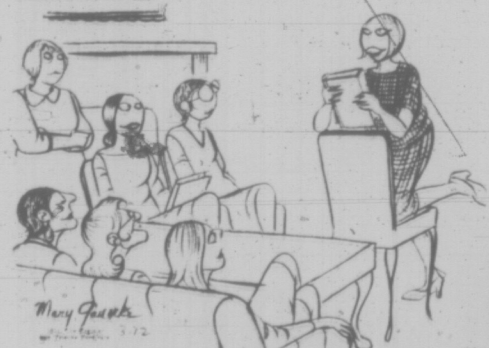

"Now that they can come in, they don't," the manager said when asked about women customers.

Self-Cleaning Floor Step to Liberation

WINNIPEG (CP)—Housewives have self-cleaning ovens—now for self-cleaning floors.

Susan Gadd, consumer information specialist with the Manitoba agriculture department, says the self-cleaning floors are among the latest developments on the market.

One new product, available now in the United States, is a no-wax vinyl flooring that rejects grease, dirt, scuff marks, spills and even floor wax. It requires only sweeping or damp-mopping to keep it clean and shiny.

Miss Gadd also describes a floor that "ingests" dirt. Walking on the floor forces the dirt through the flooring into a subfloor space connected to a vacuum system that whisks the dirt away.

Woman Whaler Most Afraid Of Seasickness

MONTREAL (CP)—Betty Osborne, 37, from suburban Dorval, was to leave Monday night for the Maritimes to face one of nature's most arduous challenges—whaling.

Mrs. Osborne plans to fight her main fear, seasickness, with work.

"My going is a test of will. I'm not the outdoors type but I'll become one. I'll work as hard as I have to."

She was an interior designer before joining the Arctic station in 1968. She will do drawings and photography for Dr. Mitchell as well as type his recorded notes. She may also assist in dissections.

"Especially if we get dolphins," she said.

It is a time to reflect that although the Soviet woman is more liberated than her Western sisters in the rubles and kopecks department, the Soviet man still is czar of the house.

Monday was an official holiday for everyone except the men who had to take over women's jobs to maintain skeleton essential services.

Husbands did the cooking

and the dishes. Shops snugly tilted up the new year-like flood of perfume, candy and flower sales.

Phase one of the Libanik Revolution swept across the Soviet Union 53 years ago with the Bolshevik takeover. It assured women and men equal pay for the same job.

Official equality and a devastating toll of male life during World War II gave Soviet women working parity unrivaled in the West.

They outnumber men by almost three to one in the medical and teaching professions. One of every three Soviet engineers is a woman. Many are lawyers. They can build skyscrapers, repair roads, mine coal, shovel cement, pilot Soviet passenger airliners.

But they can't yet ignore the broom and stove when the egalitarian working day is done. Phase two of the Libanik rising, however, is applying some heat.

Red Chinese Push Family Planning

PEKING — Birth control, feminine hygiene and traditional Chinese herbal medicine are being emphasized here in a drive to improve the health of hundreds of millions of women in China's rural areas.

Late marriage and family planning are being strongly stressed, and China's pharmaceutical industry pushes to produce more birth control materials—including pills. Sterilization operations are done in villages by mobile teams who carry their equipment on bicycles.

For those who do get pregnant, midwives are being trained in new methods of delivery, eliminating unsafe procedures based on ancient beliefs. There is also an important push to educate the often illiterate peasants in basic health and hygiene—particularly for women menstruating, pregnant or giving birth.

Linked with this is a search for new knowledge on women's ailments and new ways to treat them. The Chinese are concentrating on medicines made from cheap, readily available medical herbs rather than the rarer and more expensive western style preparations.

Much of the propaganda, investigation and treatment is being done by female "barefoot doctors" and other women trained in prevention work and able to treat common, uncomplicated medical problems.

Recent publicity about the health drive coincided with international women's day. Monday, China customarily marks it in the press with stories of exemplary female workers, peasants and soldiers.

Under the Communist Chinese women have been freed from the semi-bondage their sex knew during most of this country's long history. They pay for their liberation with hard work.

Mao Tse-tung noted in 1955, "China's women are a vast reserve of labor power. This reserve should be tapped in the struggle to build a great socialist country."

Tapped it is, particularly for the rice, wheat and cotton fields, the pigpens and the small commune industries of the countryside. Poor levels of female health thus became an important productivity consideration.

That things can stand some improvement is indicated by the survey taken over the course of a year in a county in Kiangsu Province. Of 151,000 women investigated, according to an article in the Peoples Daily, 20 per cent were not able to participate normally in collective labor and 30 per cent had some ailment.

This was a loss of some importance to the collective. Medical treatment and propaganda resources were brought to bear during this past year, and the situation is said to have improved greatly.

Stepped up investigation into female ailments has resulted in new cures. A recent New China News Agency article, for example, told of success by medical workers from Canton's Sun Yat-Sen Medical College in treating prolapse of the uterus with acupuncture and Chinese medical herbs.

"Carcinoma of the cervix uteri and choriocarcinoma" have been treated with a combination of herbs and Western medicine.

In the county in Kiangsu Province, much research has gone into developing such combined treatment methods, and even into exclusively herbal prescriptions. The Cha Nan Commune has come up with one which reduced the price for treatment of a particular women's disease from just over 2 cents per person per time to less than one-third of a cent.

One woman from the Cha Nan Commune had suffered from a female ailment for seven years, with bad effects on her work performance and participation in political study. After a visit from a barefoot doctor and treatment with herbs and pills, she was so thoroughly cured that she has since become a "live good" commune member.

Gorton Teeters In Party Crisis

CANBERRA (Reuter)—Malcolm Fraser, who resigned as Australian defence minister, told Parliament today that Prime Minister John Gorton is not fit to lead the country.

Fraser, who quit Monday in a bitter personal feud with the Australian leader, put Gorton squarely on the spot and left him fighting for his political future.

"He is not fit to hold the great office of prime minister," said the 40-year-old Fraser, regarded as a possible successor if Gorton falls.

Janitors' Contract Accepted

A contract between Greater Victoria school board and janitors, tradesmen and groundsman has been accepted by both sides.

The board's finance and legal committee, which includes all nine trustees, recommended acceptance of the new two-year pact at a meeting Monday.

The workmen had voted to accept by a 66 per cent majority Sunday. They will get an eight per cent pay increase this year and 7 1/2 per cent in 1972.

The janitors, represented by the Canadian Union of Public Employees, have agreed to a Tuesday to Saturday week, paving the way for schools to be open six days a week.

The board will pay janitors eight hours' wages for seven hours work. Janitresses will be paid at the same rates as janitors when they perform the same kinds of work.

Rose Told Policemen Where Masks Hidden

MONTREAL (CP)—The Crown closed its case today in the trial of Paul Rose, accused of kidnapping and murdering Pierre Laporte, Quebec's former labor minister, last October.

The move followed testimony from a Quebec Provincial Policeman who said that on instruction from Rose, rifle stocks and disguises were found in nearby St. Hubert.

Sgt. Marcel Ste. Marie said stocks for M-1 rifles, three plastic face masks, a pair of sunglasses and two woollen hats were found hidden at the Armstrong St. house identified as the place where Laporte was held.

The material found by police on two separate trips both made at Rose's suggestion according to testimony was hidden by a trap door in the ceiling of a closet.

Gunman Fires At House, Police Car

VAN COUVER (CP)—A heavily-armed man fired shot-gun blasts at a neighbor's house and at a cruising police car today before being arrested a block away from his home in Vancouver's east end.

When he was taken into custody, the man had a shotgun and 50 rounds of ammunition.

At his home, police seized two rifles, some ammunition and a hunting knife.

He was arrested without incident when police loosed a dog on him.

As the dog approached to within five feet, the man threw down his shotgun and was quickly taken into custody.

Police at the scene said the man broke out the front window of his parent's home about 7:15 p.m. and fired at a car driven by rookie police constable Ronald J. Needham.

Trudeaus Return To Fans, Storm

Times Ottawa Bureau

OTTAWA — The best and the worst of Ottawa greeted Prime Minister Pierre Elliott Trudeau and his 22-year-old bride of four days Monday night.

The best was a crowd of between 400 and 500 hardy souls who turned out to cheer the new chateau of 24 Sussex Drive and to shout heartily at the prime minister: "Good for you, Pierre."

The worst was the 10-degree weather, the swirling snowstorm and the near-gale winds that rocked the Department of Transport Jetstar as it set down at Uplands Airport and whipped round the faces of the newlyweds as they alighted from the aircraft.

MISERABLE

It was one of the most miserable Ottawa nights in memory — weatherwise — but for the excited crowd out to meet the new Mrs. Trudeau it was a fairy tale come true.

The bride, the former Margaret Sinclair of North Vancouver, stepped into the heli-of Ottawa's winter wearing a red tapestry midi skirt with matching coat, a white fur hat, and red leather boots.

And a smile that stretched from ear to ear and was as warm as an August morning.

She and the prime minister, looking surprisingly boyish and trying to stay in the background, were greeted at the plane by Public Works Minister and Mrs. Arthur Laing of Vancouver South.

Laing was acting prime minister in Trudeau's absence. The normal acting prime minister, External Affairs Minister Mitchell Sharp, is away on a 16-day official visit to five African nations.

Also on hand on the ice-and-snow-covered tarmac — Ottawa has had an all-time record 155 inches of snow so far this winter — was Toronto MP Barney Danson, the prime minister's parliamentary secretary.

March 18 strike to protest the government's Industrial Relations Bill.

"Some of us are tired of being pushed around by a bunch of flaming Commies," one shop steward said.

The original March 18 strike call came from the Amalgamated Union of Engineering Workers.

Four out of five of the Acocks workers are members of the Transport and General Workers Union which supports the strike.

The rank-and-file revolt in British labor came at a troubled and confused time in British industry when unemployment totals 660,000.

The revolts strengthened the hand of Prime Minister Edward Heath. His Conservative government proposes to halt a wave of unofficial strikes with the Industrial Relations Bill that would put unions under broad rules carrying fines for violations.

And, the government has thrown its weight against any wage settlements above 10 per cent.

Rolls-Royce, aero-engine and motor car giant now in receivership, announced that 4,300 workers would be laid off in the next three weeks.

Most are executives, managers, technicians and designers.

China Gives U.S. Serious Warning On 'Aggression'

Times News Services

PEKING — Premier Chou En-lai returned here Monday night after a previously unannounced visit to Hanoi where he issued the most serious warning to date concerning the "serious threat" the United States is "posing" to China.

Few details of his visit were available here — the first information came from a Hanoi radio broadcast — but observers generally echoed the diplomat who remarked: Chou En-lai doesn't go anywhere for nothing.

The Friday-to-Monday visit was notable for the high-level military officials accompanying Chou, armed forces deputy chief of staff Chiu Hui-tso and Yeh Chien-ying, vice-chairman of the Communist party's military affairs commission.

According to Hanoi radio, Chou declared that his country had made "adequate preparations" to meet the American threat but he did not elaborate.

'LOSE NEIGHBORS'

The three Indochina countries are China's close neighbors. By willfully enlarging their aggressive war in the Indochina area, the U.S. imperialists are posing a serious threat to China. The Chinese government and the Chinese people have already seen through all the frenzied and adventurous nature of the U.S. imperialists and have made adequate preparations," Chou said.

"The Nixon government must be responsible for all the serious consequences arising from its unceasing expansion of the aggressive war in the Indochinese region."

These words, were offset to some degree at least by following statements that "at present the international situation is very good" and that the Nixon administration is "facing difficulties both at home and abroad and becoming very weak." Chou said this was "clear enough" from President Nixon's recent State of the World message.

'MORALE MISSION'

In Washington today, officials were quoted as saying that the Chinese threats as a whole have not yet approached the level of warning issued prior to Peking's intervention in the Korean War. One official saw the Chou visit as essentially a "morale mission."

Reinforcing the importance of Chou's journey to Hanoi is the fact that he has made only two other trips outside China since mid-1966. In September, 1969, he made a brief appearance in Hanoi to pay his respects at the bier of Ho Chi Minh.

In April last year he made a three-day state visit to North Korea with full fanfare.

Although his departure was secret, Chou's arrival home was grandly marked. Thousands of cheerers, slogan-shouters and colorfully costumed performers were taken in buses to the airport hours before the premier's plane touched down.

WORDS GROW STERN

He was greeted by armed forces chief Huang Yung-Sheng, Cambodia's Prince Norodom Sihanouk and a solid turnout of party politbureau members.

Chinese statements about Indochina grew more stern last month after the U.S.-supported invasion of Laos. China called the action a grave threat to this country and promised to take "all effective measures" to aid its Indochinese allies.

Laird Says Red Weapons Advancing

WASHINGTON (Reuter)—Defence Secretary Melvin Laird reported today further Soviet and Chinese progress in strategic weapons, but asked Congress for only a limited expansion of the Safeguard anti-ballistic missile system.

He said the nature of the Russian and Chinese nuclear threats was serious enough to call for full deployment of Safeguard, to embrace 12 widely separated sites if eventually authorized.

But he told the House of Representatives armed services committee that President Nixon had decided to exercise restraint in the hope that the strategic arms limitation talks with the Soviet Union will produce agreements to scale down the arms race.

Laird said in his annual defence strategy statement to Congress that "China might have tested an intercontinental ballistic missile over a reduced range last year."

Defence officials said there were indications, although not conclusive evidence, that the test took place over several thousand miles.

'VICTORY FOR B.C. PEOPLE'

'Road-Running' Halted

By PETER MCNELLY

The provincial government moved Monday to protect and control development of lands adjacent to new highways.

And the New Democratic Party hailed the move as a "genuine victory for the people of British Columbia," which followed their attack on land speculation earlier in the legislative session.

Highways Minister Wesley Black introduced in the legislature an amendment to the Department of Highways Act which gives the government the power to expropriate any land adjacent to new, proposed or relocated highways.

The amendment does not apply to existing highways. The government has been under heavy fire this session from New Democrat MLAs led by Robert Williams (NDP — Vancouver East) for failing to halt land speculation — nicknamed "road-running" — along highway routes.

Williams has charged that Premier Bennett's sons are among "a growing class of rip-off artists and millionaires on the make" who have profited from development of lands adjacent to B.C. highways.

In an interview outside the legislature, Black denied that the government brought in the amendment because of Williams' attacks.

"We have been considering an amendment to this act for some time," Black said, "but it's been very difficult to come up with the correct wording, and a great many other facets."

Black praised the bill for being " gutsy" and simple. The government has the authority to sell, lease, dispose of by tender or auction any lands it may expropriate under the Department of Highways Act.

Nothing in the act or the amendment requires the government to expropriate lands adjacent to public highways.

Present wording of the act allows expropriation only for the purposes of acquiring lands for public works or establishment of wildlife reserves. The amendment enlarges this power to include "the purpose of protecting and controlling the use of any land adjacent to the right-of-way of any proposed, new, or newly relocated highway."

response to his earlier charges against the premier's sons.

He said the government "is obviously embarrassed by the disclosures."

PROMISE EARLIER

Williams noted that Bennett had promised in 1968 as highways minister after Phil Gaglardi resigned — also under fire for land deals involving his sons — that "road-running" would stop.

"I said at the time it was a victory for the people," Williams said. "Now that this has been placed in statute form, we consider it to be a genuine victory for the people of British Columbia."

Williams warned that the amendment could just be a "smokescreen" unless the government pursues an aggressive program of land acquisition. This is the only way to erase the "unhappy past record" of the government as far as land speculation near highways is concerned, he said.

Alex Macdonald, (NDP — Vancouver East), who first used the phrase "road-running" back in 1968, said Friday the bill gives the
